A Fireworks Capture.

ROUBLE raged on the irrigation ditch. The upper gang and the lowditch. The upper gang and the low-er gang were at outs. The former had lost a horse and the lower gang was supposed to include the thief.
"It just means a fight," exclaimed Mack to Simpson, as the two members of the lower gang rode over the plains one sum-mer night. "There can't be any horse stealing around these parts and not have aghting. "No; and the feeling isn't any too good already," added the other.

The ponies loped easily, and turning down the trail went swiftly into the thick sunflowers of a ravine. It was nearly sunset and the tall weeds seemed to be almost like young saplings. Suddenly the horses stopped; ahead was an unusual sight, a white-topped prairie schooner. "A one-horse rig, too," exclaimed Simp-son, looking at the thills that were on the front of the wagon. "And deserted, too," and Matt drew nearer to the strange outfit.

"Well, what do you think of a man that will do this?" He pulled the curtains aside and showed the sleeping form of a boy perhaps 7 years old. The little fel-low looked peaked and helpless and the sympathies of both the men were aroused

Well, he's a rascal," was the reply at last and the curtain was dropped.

"He ain't a rascal," came from the inside of the wagon. "My papa is good to "Hello, there, what are you doing here?"

asked Matt. "Waiting for fireworks; papa has gone after them. He slways gets them for me on the Fo'ther July."

"What did he say?" asked Matt. "Says his father has gone after fire-works-a likely story. The boy's hungry; that is what is the matter with him." "Well, let's feed him. I'll go over and get him something from the camp. And, say, I'll bring him some fireworks, too. I'd forgot it, but to-day is the Fourth of July, and the boss has a lot of rockets and shings ready to fire off. All the men are out hunting for the horse thief and they have forgotten all about it. I can steal a

Away rode Matt in the gathering dark away roue start in the gathering dark-ness, and although the pony went very fast, and the man did not stay in camp more than a few moments, the wait seem-ed a long one to the watcher in the ravine with the boy. "Here he comes," he said at last, when the rattle of horse's hoofs was heard on the prairie sod. Matt came down the ra-vine and had some difficulty in fluding the wagon hidden in the sunflowers. At tast he opened the package of food and laid the fireworks on the grass beside the

"Supper first," was the order from Simpson, and the three ate the generous supply that had been brought, "Good thing not to take the kid to the ranch," said Matt. "The men will have a rough time there to night, and they wouldn't spare the boy."

"Now for the fun," and away went one of the rockets into the darkness, scattering its splendor over the level plains that spread from the edge of the ravine. The jack rabbits and the prairie owls saw it and wondered what it could be. Somebody else saw it, for away off to the south, where its light was visible only as a faint glimmer, there was a company of horsemen, and they turned their animals in that direction. "Hark!" said Matt, as the fun was at its height. "Somebody's coming."

The light of the last rocket had given a passing view of a man on horseback at the crest of a ravine. In a moment the man was near them and he was accompan-led by a large number. In the midst of the party, with his head bound in a large red handkerchief, was seen the figure of a man tied on a horse.

"We have got the thief," said the leader of the newcomers.
"Well," replied Matt, "what are you bringing him here for?"

"We kind of lost our way and thought this was the camp. But we are going to settle with the rascal right here, anyhow. It might not be best to take him to the camp, after all."

"Sure it is the man?"
"Bound to be—got the horse."

It was thought that he would get enough punishment to prevent him from ever returning to that section again. He eviden ly thought so, too, for he was trying his best to escape.

"All ready," called Matt. "Go!"
The bandage was dropped from the man's eyes and the ropes came from off his feet and arms. A dozen whips were raised to strike, but before they could be used a dramatic scene followed. The oil-bearing sections of Southern California promise to be greatly enlarged before long. Not only at New port is development work going on, with promising indications, but also between that point on the coast and the Whittier field several new explorations are being made, or are planned. It is evident from present indications that the oil business of Southern California is as yet only in its infancy.
