

MY OWN SELF AGAIN.

Mrs. Gates Writes to Mrs. Pinkham, Follows Her Advice and is Made Well.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For nearly two and one-half years I have been in feeble health. After my little child came it seemed I could not get my strength again. I have chills and the severest pains in my limbs and top of head and almost insensible at times. I also have a pain just to the right of breast bone. It is so severe at times that I cannot lie on my right side. Please write me what you think of my case.

Mrs. Clara Gates, Johns P. O., Miss., April 25, 1898. DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as advised and now send you a letter for publication. For several years I was in such wretched health that life was almost a burden. I could hardly walk across the floor, was so feeble. Several of our best physicians attended me, but failed to help. I concluded to write to you for advice. In a few days I received such kind, motherly letter. I followed your instructions and am my 'old self' again. Was greatly benefited before I had used one bottle. May God bless you for what you are doing for suffering women.

THREE DAILY TRAINS BETWEEN OGDEN AND DENVER.

The increase in transcontinental travel by way of Salt Lake City in consequence of the scenic and other attractions of the route, has recently justified the Rio Grande Western Railway—in connection with the Denver & Rio Grande and Colorado Midland Railroads—says the Salt Lake Tribune, in establishing a triple daily train passenger service between Ogden and Denver. All of these trains are equipped with the latest appliances, improvements and cars. This road now operates through sleepers between Chicago, Ogden and San Francisco, also a perfect dining car service. Send 2c postage for literature, rates or other information to J. D. Mansfield, 253 Washington street, Portland; or Geo. W. Heinz, general passenger agent, Salt Lake City.

THE OTHER FELLOW.

HE IS NOW HOLDING THE JOB YOU WANT.

Gov. Shaw's Advice to the College Graduate: If You Want the Position You Must Do the Work Better than the Uneducated Man Ahead of You.

"When you go out from school," said Gov. Leslie M. Shaw, of Iowa, in a recent address to the students of Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., "you will find 'the other fellow,' as Sam Jones says. He has not been to college, but he is occupying the place which you want, and he is four years ahead of you. He will stay there, too, unless the training you get in college better prepares you for his place."

This is a plain statement of an indisputable fact, and one which college students should commit to memory. A mere college training will not enable any one of them to get "the other fellow's" job unless the training the graduate has secured is of the practical kind, which makes him better fitted for the place than the man without a college education, who holds it. He will not be able to secure the place on his diplomas, on his standing in his class, on his fraternity affiliations, on his good looks, his good clothes, or even his good recommendations, and if by chance he should obtain a position on the strength of these he will not be able to hold it if he does not possess in an equal degree the merit which enabled the other fellow to make his way without any of these advantages.

Everything else being equal, the younger man who is fortunate enough to enter upon a career in these days with a college education has an advantage over the other fellow, but he cannot afford to rest or play upon that advantage for a moment. If he depended upon it to carry him through, the other fellow will pass him in the race. "If a person can do one thing and do it well he will be worth something," said Gov. Shaw. "It makes no difference what you do, as long as you do it better than he has ever done before. There is no visible opening in any line you might select. On the other hand, there is a splendid opening if you can try a case better than any other attorney. There are many attorneys, but not so many lawyers; many pedagogues, but few teachers; many medical men, but few doctors. One-fourth of the lawyers in Chicago can try a case no better than when they began, and all through Wisconsin there are women who can cook no better than they could the day they were married, and they are told so three times a day. The world is ready to pay any price for excellence. The difficulty with the average man and the rest of them is that they do not pay enough attention to detail. No matter what profession you master, you must also master detail."

All this is true. It is so demonstrably and palpably true that recognition of its truth has revolutionized the system of higher education in this country within the past twenty-five years. It was in response to the demand that the colleges should turn out graduates with some fixed purpose in mind, with some special training, with something like an equipment that would enable them to compete with the other fellow, and, if possible, excel him, that Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Williams, Cornell, and our Western universities adopted wholly or in part the principles which obtained exclusively in purely technological institutions only a few years ago.

The danger for a time was that the reaction in favor of the practical branches of education as against the cultural might go too far, and, in fact, to the credit of the faculties of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston and Armour Institute of Technology in Chicago that the danger was avoided. As the purely cultural colleges have exhibited a tendency to become more practical, the purely technical institutions have exhibited even a stronger tendency to become more cultural, so that the latter are equipping their students to-day, not only for the inevitable hand-to-hand encounters with the other fellows, but for the higher places in life for which their college training qualifies them.

The college students of our times, it is a cheerful to know, are having the doctrines enunciated by Gov. Shaw ground into them on all sides. They are made to realize now that they cannot step out of a university into a big legal or medical practice, into a daily newspaper editorial chair, into the presidency of a bank, or to the forefront in any walk of life, just because they graduate with honors. They are being taught now that, while education gives them a tremendous advantage, nothing short of actual contact with the sharp corners and actual experiences in the hurly-burly of life will finally enable them to compete with the other fellow. He is not only four years ahead of them—he may be twenty—be often is—in practical knowledge, and he will always remain about that far in advance of the man who thinks he has nothing more to learn when he bids good-by to his alma mater.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

An Arizona Bill of Fare. "I was at a restaurant out in Arizona once," said a salesman for a well-known revolver corporation, "and was looking over the bill of fare. It gave a better description of some features of the country than a whole volume. For 10 cents you could get some delicious lamb chops and fried potatoes. But bread and butter were extra, while a dish of milk toast was 15 cents. You see that meant that they raise cattle out there for their meat and not for dairy purposes. Milch cows are scarce and dear. But the Chinese broil beefsteak by trying it and then making the marks of the griddle with a red hot poker."

ALASKA BOUNDARY.

United States and British Surveyors to Establish the Line Named in the Modus Vivendi.

The American members of the international commission appointed to survey and mark out the Alaska boundary line at Lynn canal, under the modus vivendi, arrived in Seattle from Washington, and will proceed to Victoria, where they will meet the two British members of the commission. The American members are C. H. Tilman, assistant superintendent of the United States coast and geological survey, and his assistant, O. R. French. They are gathering statistics and information concerning the matter they have in hand. Mr. Tilman said it would require probably two months to complete the survey. The line will be marked with the usual monuments, stakes, etc. On Chillikoot and White paces, monuments of a permanent character will be set up, so that there may be no possible dispute at these points as to the exact location of the line.

Henry Fielding was once asked by Lord Denbigh why he wrote his name "Fielding" instead of "Felding," as his lordship's family used. "I can not tell, my lord," replied the novelist, "except it be that my branch of the family were the first that knew how to spell."

Sir Robert Peel was once going through a picture collection with a friend when there was a portrait of a prominent Englishman who was famous for saying sharp things. "How wonderfully like!" said the friend; "you can see the quiver on his lips." "Yes," replied Sir Robert, "and the arrows coming out of it."

They are telling a story in Chicago about an advance agent for the Thomas Orchestra who recently went to New Orleans to book dates for concerts. He was told that it would be well for him first to talk the matter over with a wealthy woman who is a leader in the musical circles of the city. So he called at her residence, and a ring brought out an old negro, who took the caller's card, on which printed the legend, "Representing the Thomas Orchestra." Presently a young woman came to the door holding the card in her hand. She did not seem to understand the object of the call. The agent attempted to explain, but was cut short by the young woman, who said: "I don't think we want any music to-day."

The president of a manufacturing firm in Chicago has two letters from a man in Michigan. The first set forth that the writer had settled upon a piece of land that had "rite smart pin timber on it;" that his neighbors, with the exception of "sum french Canucks at the north end of the lak," had also "rite smart" of timber, and would hail the advent of a "sormill" with delight. "How nutch wood a smoi sormill cost?" N. B. if a Frenchman name like Lamort riters you to ask about this hese no gud and a ded beat of the first water." The firm wrote back to inform their correspondent that a sawmill such as he seemed to want cost about three hundred dollars. A catalogue was inclosed, which would give him an idea of the plant, and the firm hoped to be favored with his order. The firm had no idea that its letter would give serious offense. There was no doubt, however, that the Michigan man was quite annoyed. He wrote: "You must take me for a fool. If I had three hundred dollars what in wud I want a sormill for?"

Many years ago, when President Kruger was in England, he was approached concerning some concession, railway or otherwise, by a business man in London. The negotiations lasted for some time. One evening the Londoner, who was staying at the same hotel, having spent many hours with Mr. Kruger and his companion, went to bed much exhausted, and feeling he had not got quite all he wanted. Next morning he arose at nine o'clock, and went along the corridor to Mr. Kruger's bedroom. To his astonishment it was empty, and all the luggage was gone. "Oh, sir," said the chambermaid, "Mr. Kruger and his friend left at six this morning." Then, with a giggle of amused reminiscence, the girl added: "They was a queer couple, sir, and no mistake. When 'e passed your door, sir, Mr. Kruger, 'e started dancin' right outside your door, sir, 'e and his friend. They didn't know as I one saw them, sir, but Bessie and I see them, unbeknown to the top of the stairs. Then they went downstairs, sir, fairly splittin' their sides with laughin', though they didn't say a word."

During an advance in Manila recently, says the Chicago Tribune, one company had to lie down at the side of the road for shelter from the well-directed volleys of the insurgents. One of the privates had dropped his haversack in the middle of the road away back, and, after the company had laid down, he calmly stood up and walked down the road toward the lost haversack. He made a fine target for the insurgents, and the bullets rattled around him pretty lively. "Here, come back here, O'Malley," yelled the lieutenant of the company; "you'll be killed." "Well," replied O'Malley over his shoulder, "I might just as well be killed as have Gen. Otis a-runnin' me up hill and down dale and comin' over to me house every mornin' and a-sayin', 'O'Malley, why don't you pay the government for that haversack?' Then he calmly walked on and got the lost piece of property, and as he came back and sat down just in time to escape a volley of Mausers, he threw the haversack on the ground and said: "And when he does come to-morrow mornin' to me house I'll say, 'Otis, me little man, you're dead wrong. I never lost no haversack. There's your bloody old potato bag. Take it to the Government with me compliments.'"

BRADSTREET'S REVIEW.

Readjustment of Quotations the Leading Feature of Trade.

Bradstreet's says: Readjustments of price quotations to meet the changed condition of supply and demand are still the leading features of the general trade. In volume the business doing is of a between-season character, improvement in some lines being counterbalanced by increased dullness in other branches. That the basic conditions of the trade are in the main of a favorable nature, however, is proved by the continued good railroad earnings returns which come to hand. The fact seems to be that the volume of business offered the transportation interests of the country continues considerably in excess of a year ago. Crop reports are relatively most favorable as regards corn and oats. In the Southwest, wheat crop prospects are still maintained at a high average. In the Northwest wheat has been helped by late rains, but owing to their late arrival it is not certain how much benefit was obtained thereby.

The hand-to-mouth domestic demand for iron and steel continues, but the number of small orders received is not so plentiful. The situation in the pipe market is no better, and plates are weaker. Concessions of fractions of a dollar are apparently easily obtained for pig iron, but throughout the trade the feeling is rather more cheerful, the feeling being that lower prices will on the one hand encourage consumptive demands, and, on the other hand, tend to restrict production by less economical plants.

REWARDS FOR ANDERSON BELLES.

Notice has been received at the Swedish and Norwegian consulate in New York that the king of Sweden and Norway has decided to reward persons who have found objects belonging to the Andree polar expedition, and that a fund has been set aside for rewards for persons who may hereafter find objects from the expedition. It is supposed that the hope of reward is meant to be an incentive to whalers and other mariners who go far north to search for traces of the explorer and penetrate places out of the beaten path for that purpose.

Its Saddest Aspect. The Liverpool Post, calling attention to the report of Dr. Wiglesworth on the Rainhill asylum, says: "The evil of drunkenness has many sad aspects. But perhaps the saddest of all is the fact that as drunkenness increases so does insanity. Last year 186 patients were admitted to the asylum as a result of drunken excess. Of these 78 were women. During the year 38 recovered and were discharged. At the end of December over 130 remained, of whom less than 50 are regarded as curable. This refers to one year only and to one asylum."

Fortunes to be made in oil. California is destined to be the greatest oil field of the world. Already vast riches have been discovered in petroleum, and great fortunes are sure to be made in that section this year. We own a quarter section of land, 160 acres, in the heart of the famous Kern County Oil Field. The oil is there and all we have to do is to drill a well and tap it.

For development purposes we will sell 2,000 shares of Treasury Stock at $1 per share. People who buy this stock will see it increase in value fast and they will make money fast.
