PORTLAND'S MORAL WAY.

Portland is going through a paper moral wave, and the mosback town is up in arms because there is gambling going on under the very noses of the public officers. Why all this fuss about it, Dr. Hill? Why do you not get down to first principles? As long as saloons are licensed, so long, there will be a paucity of gambling. There is not a town in Oregon but plays with the license evil, more or less. The church vote, that is to say, the vote of those who profess to be Christians, would make temperance towns of nearly all of our municipalities. And yet, they want the "revenue" and so license saloons. Many then turn around and howl at the saloon man when the voters are particeps criminis. Just as long as people proceed to practice the opposite of what they preach there will be gambling going on in all places. When people set aside their pretended ideas for "revenue" we will no longer be bothered with "moral waves" in Portland every year or two.

The biannual session of the legislature is at hand and the newspapers of Oregon are devoting more space to the senatorial election than to the pressing needs of legislation. So it will remain until we elect our United States senators by the ballot paper.

A. C. Latham, one of our well known teachers, has decided to quite the profession and is now a fireman on the freight running through this station. A. C. will get to the top and is to be congratulated on his good fortune.

County Clerk Morgan granted but one Christmas license—that to Oscar P. Waggener and Miss Maggie Woodcock. This is a pretty slim list for the holidays.

F. Berger, of Cedar Mill, says that the Cedar Mill people are much surprised that no bid was sent to the county court in the matter of crushing rock for the improvement of the county road between that point and the top of the hill.

Talk about your December weather—what is the matter with Oregon? Where in the temperate zone can you find weather that will beat that of the Willamette? Here you are free from snow and that bitter cold that is so characteristic of nearly all the states in the temperate lines. It is Oregon against the world, after all.

First Shoes For Baby!

A BELL BOY!

"A Bell Boy," a farce without sufficient plot to detract the attention of the audience from the "main event," namely the bright and lively specialty bill, pleased a house that packed the Metropolitan last night. The company is just the kind to give such a play a proper presentation, brimful of people who can do something amusing and original, for 15 minutes at a stretch and who also can fill their several chairs in the hot without rattling around. There is a lively swing and more to the piece from curtain to curtain, all says "something doing," and in spots more going on at one time than the audience can readily follow. It is a play designed as a laugh-producer, and the plans and specifications of the playwright are carried out accurately by the company. A country hotel, in which a company of strolling players have found lodging, and where they came into contact with people of far different professions, serve as the theme and the bell boy always going and coming, and leaving trouble for the lodgers and fun for the audience in his wake, is the principal figure. John M. Welch, as the bell boy, does a piece of character comedy work which marks him as a first-class entertainer. Always in a good humor himself, he keeps the audience in a better one, and the action is far from lagging while he is mixed up in it. Besse Marlowe, the leading attraction of the feminine contingent, is graceful and pretty and won the hearts of those over the footlights from her first appearance. L. J. Harvey, as Izzy Blotky, did very creditable character work. It is in the specialties, however, that the company is at the strongest. The "coon" songs by the Young Sisters were cleverly given and the minstrel act prima donna, clever and effective. Armstrong and Cassidy, did a good deal of character work which gave several new songs and did a good deal of act. L. J. Harvey, who is the possessor of a good voice, surprised the audience by using it and was rewarded by a number of encores. Tom Morse, as "Coon Shouter," filled his part acceptably. Lasso altogether, "A Bell Boy" is one of the best attractions of its kind Manager Jones has secured this season.
