THE old saying that there is nothing in a name has been exploded. A Furnish has been nominated for governor, and there is no doubt but that the financial ability of the man to live up to his name had more to do with getting his nomination than any of his personal qualifications. But it is more than likely that the ex-democrat will have to "furnish" some more of his boodle before he will go to Salem as Oregon's governor. He may not be the first rich man in this state who has ere this discovered that Oregon has a conscience.

WITH a banker candidate for governor and a banker candidate for the United States senate, it looks as though the dominant element of the republican party is bound to give Oregon a "business" administration—but it may be some time before Oregon will consent to place its business in the vaults at Portland and Pendleton, even if the bankercrats have captured the party at the conventions.

THE Oregonian says that the representative ticket nominated here, at the recent republican county convention, is the ablest put up for years. The Oregonian cautiously failed to give its authority for the positive statement. Men like Hon. H. V. Gates, C. F. Tigard, and scores of others who might be named, should certainly feel flattered at the compliment paid them by this delicate bon mot of the Oregonian.

THE Isthmian canal bill has been relegated to the rear, and the placing it at the foot of the legislative calendar will mean that it is to not be passed at this session of Congress. While it may be proper to move slowly in matters of so grave importance, yet, one can not help but notice the broad smile on the faces o railwaydom as the bill is ordered to "go 'way back and sit down" for a while!

THE democrats of the state are in convention today at Portland, and the ticket will most likely lead with Geo. E. Chamberlin as the candidate for governor. Mr. Chamberlin is a man of integrity, and will make such a race for the office that Mr. Furnish will know that he is in a campaign. The ticket had not been nominated as The Argus goes to press.

SOME one has discovered that McKinley descended from a race of kings. That's nothing. We are all descended from primeval man, and kings from them, as well as we.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Reames, of Jacksonville, are in the city this week.

Preaching at the Christian church next Sunday morning and evening by Elder J. A. Brown.

Samuel Ennis, one of our popular educators, has removed to Portland, where he will reside temporarily.

Perry Abbott, who is in the employ of the baggage department of the Southern Pacific, at San Francisco, visited here with his parents this week.

The republican central committee met this forenoon and afternoon, and all, or nearly all, the various candidates were in town. Their fight will soon be on, and times will be more brisk. There's nothing like a campaign to keep things lively—and the campaign comes only every two years.

The Sixth Annual meeting of the Congregational Churches and Ministers of the West Willamette met in this city this week, in a two days' session. The convention was a very fruitful one, and the reports of the various churches were very hopeful.

Pope, the photographer, Second Street, at the Hoyt gallery, is turning out some fine work these days. If you want photos with the proper expression, and on popular mounts, give him a call. He will guarantee his work and his prices are right.

The Presbytery of Portland met this week, and among other business was the taking up of a petition for a church at Reedville. Rev. D Holt, Rev. J. V. Milligan and Rev. A. At the same meeting Mr. Francis Chalmers was selected to attend the Presbytery at the general assembly to be held in New York City in the near future.
