THAT EXTRA SESSION.

does not matter what animus ompts Gov. Geer in his intention call an extra session. It mat- s not a picayune whether he ants to get even" or what his otive may be. Both parties had flat salary and economy of ad- nistration planks in their plat- rms, and these planks should be ade law at the very first oppor- nity. An extra session, called a w days before the regular session ald place the newly elected offi- rs upon a flat salary, and if Mr. nbar, Mr. Whitney, or any of e newly elected, fail to appreciate e planks upon which they were ected, they can refuse to qualify. l this talk about a contract be- een the state and these gentle- en is moonshine. No one could rce them to qualify—so where is e contract. The conventions de ared for salary reform That claration meant henceforth and reafter. It did not mean four ars hence. The way to reduce penses is to reduce. Gov. Geer s but one thing to do if he follow e wishes of the majority of the ters of the state. Every little gan in the state is against the ex- a session on the ground that it ill be "expensive." That is non- nse. If the extra session is call- l three or four days before the gular session the flat salary easure can become a law, the ini- ative and referendum can be laced in the constitution, and a reat saving can be effected for the tate It is to be hoped that the overnor will not back down on he call. If the extra session is not alled there will be four years more f graft, much of which Governor Chamberlain will be powerless to revent. But, in event the extra ession is not called, the Fultonites vill have a merry time getting way from Chamberlain's watch- alness.

MISSED THEIR OPPORTUNITY.

Had Jack Matthews known that he vote on governor was to have een so close the "official count" vould have been invoked and Fur- nish would have been the governor- lect. But the valiant leader of he combine thought that Cham- erlain could not get sufficient otes to beat the Pendletonian It vould appear that the independent ote was much larger than the Portland Falstaff dreamed, and the machinery for a count out was not tarted in time. Readers will re- member that it looked like the Matthews' people were for a time ontemplating a claim, but it fail- d to materialize. Even the Ore- onian, in its "purity," was getting eady to have the vote counted by he legislature, one by one! But he machine heard something drop. They found that public sentiment vould not brook a steal, and the ontemplated move was lost in the huffle.

DEVELOP THE COUNTRY.

A motor line between this city and Portland will do much for the east- rn section of Washington county, it once, and as soon as the road is uilt to Forest Grove, the whole ountry tributary to the line will eel the effects of the railway. The ine will afford rapid transit for the erishable product of our farms and gardens, and this will lend an mpetus to improvement all along he line of road. Thousands of cres now in timber will be cleared p, and the country will blossom n productiveness. Aside from the vast benefits to be derived through he agricultural districts, there will will be a betterment in the towns n the survey. Hundreds of busi- ness people in the metropolis will come to Hillsboro and Forest taxes will not be as high as they are in Portland. For the next few years there will be a remarkable movement in the Northwest, and Washington county stands to have her share of the incoming immigration and the vast business benefits to accrue from the coming exposition. Business men of Hillsboro and Forest Grove should get together and seriously consider the advisability of making their towns more attractive to resident people. This is an age of progression, and to make the most of it one should not attempt to live in the dark ages. Let all the people pull together, regardless of opinion. We want to grow—we will grow—in spite of the mossbacks. The way to make the county of Washington get to the front is to place it in the front rank of business progressiveness.

It is not well to sneer at the futile efforts to capture the two desperadoes who escaped from the penitentiary after having murdered the guards. The law will stretch the necks of the two murderers, and they know it as well as any one. Therefore, they will take desperate chances to make their escape. They will not stop at killing their pursuers, and it is just as well for those not in the chase to not make themselves ridiculous. When a man goes after Tracy and Merrill he takes his life in his hands. As to the moral ethics of the case, it were better that the brutes get clear away than that two or three more good men go to their death. The proper way to catch them is to get them both on the hip and bring them in dead.
