EGOTISM RUN TO SEED.

over Cleveland's latest ebullition oks like egotism run to seed. He sumes that he is the Moses who to lead the fight against Hanna- n. This is peculiarly funny, for is like mutiny in an army; noble ainst noble; and pirate against rate. It is possible that Mr. eveland argues that the only an to beat a trust man for presi- nt is another trust man. Per- aps he is right, but the people of e democratic party do not want beat a trust with a trust agent. r. Cleveland's egotism will get no mpathy in the democratic camp. he party wants no aid from such Cleveland or David B. Hill. hese reformers are altogether too onscious of their own greatness, nd they are on altogether too ex- ellent terms with the Wall street ourse. The Benedict-ine ex-presi- ent thinks he is like a saviour— ut he is mistaken. When he roans he would have all others eep. Like Rosencrantz, in Ham- et, he says, "Never, alone, did the King sigh, but with a general roan."

Let us not have a corporation lemocrat, and let us not have a orporation platform. Corpora- ions may be all right in their places—but they have no place in a democratic platform, or under the skin of a presidential candidate.

A WISE VOTE.

The adoption of the direct legislation amendment by the voters of Oregon, was a wise move, and one that does credit to the people of the state. The new measure, now to be organic law, will prove a deterrent to hostile legislation, and it will give the people a chance to express themselves upon public questions. We can now have a government of the people if the people so will it.

It is amusing to note that our friends, the enemy, are always telling us how disastrous Bryan has been to the party! It will be remembered that Bryan took hold of the democratic party in 1896, and nearly won a victory when the democratic party hadn't license to carry a single precinct in the United States. It will be remembered that, with the concentrated efforts of the banks; the trusts; the corporations; the big metropolitan press of our nation, to defeat him, and with the burden of the Cleveland administration, with its banking allies of the East, to carry, Bryan carried more northern states than ever before was touched by a democratic candidate, and gave the plutocratic ticket a chase for first place that surprised even the Cleveland democrats, who thought it would be easy to send the Nebraskan to defeat. Four years later, Bryan made his second fight, when the sense of the voter was lulled to security by a prosperity that came in spite of false governmental theories. Bryan told them what they might expect. The whirlwind of trust domination is now in the vortex of industrial life. Law is laughed at. Private rights are subordinated to the wishes of the millionaire trust stock owners, and farmers are not recognized as intelligent, in press editorials, unless they indorse the skinning of their own cuticle by trust exactions. Bryan was, and is, right. His ideas are in sympathy with the producers and consumers proper. With the principles dead, there will be but use for one party—the party of trusts, which fools more people than any other party in existence. Let the democratic party adhere to the pure policies of the new democracy, or let it close its efforts. No Cleveland oracles need apply for purity in politics, is the fact that corporations and their press fight a candidate. They are fighting Bryan—and when they cease to fight him we shall have evidence that Bryan is wrong.

The Independent says that it will tell something on Chamberlain unless The Argus quits talking about Furnish. The Argus merely gave its opinion on the reason of the defeat of Furnish, after it was sure that Chamberlain was elected, knowing that the Independent would not give any to its readers. But—The Argus will assure its readers that from the character of the stuff published by the "staff" on the Independent during the election, and from the falsehoods circulated by Furnish's supporters, nothing worse could be published, against Chamberlain, than the rot which helped to elect him, and which gave Furnish the smallest majority ever received in this county by a republican candidate for governor. A little more of this insinuation from the Independent and The Argus will wake up from its lethargy and do a little "talking" all down the line, and while it is at it, it will "touch down" the gamut from the head and brains of the machine clear down to the "toe-jam" of the filthy animal, which has neither self-respect nor decency.

Regarding an appropriation for the Lewis & Clark exposition, why would it not be a good idea to get an expression of the voters as to what shall be done, and how much the state shall give to the enterprise? It will be the money of the people, and the voice of the voter should be consulted. There is no doubt but what such a measure will be upheld by a majority of the people, but it might be proper to have the appropriation so passed by the legislature that a "No" from the people would stop it. If we are to have a government by the people let us commence at once, or do business with the end of giving the voter his choice, if he shall want it.

The virility of the political ideas of Bryan, and the sturdy character of the man, are best illustrated in the attacks of the corporate press, from day to day. That he is a factor in our political life is many times proven, each issue of the big dailies, by their arraignment of the Nebraskan. Mr. Bryan is not a candidate for the presidency, but at the same time, should he be nominated, he can and will receive a support that would come from all who love Jeffersonian simplicity and purity of government.

The Oregonian says that every democratic paper is saying that "Geer is the logical candidate for senator." The Oregonian is necessarily wrong in this. However, many democratic papers, and many which have no use for Geer are asking why Geer is not as good as any man brought out by the notorious Jack Matthews.

With all his failings, we must love Henri Watterson for the magnificent way in which he takes the measure of the "Stuffed Prophet," Grover Cleveland.
