Hearts By ERMINIE RIVES Courageous

The stars rocked dimly in the tide | Cornwallis sent semmering from burn Too bad, sir," said the captain of the cd lower plantations trailed through currines. "No use to lower a boat now. Tis too dark to find a whale. He'll be ashore in twenty minutes." "Another of your blasted experiments, Charles," said Sir Evelyn.

T Was a gloomy Virginia to which Anne returned that anxious fall-a Virginia whose heart beat with the north, where Howe was weaving his famous cord to encircle the throat of the monster rebellion. Pastoral life had ended abruptly; the golden age had become one of iron. "And all the women that were wise hearted did spin with their

Gindden Hall suffered with the rest. Colonel Tillotson was much away on affairs of the committee of safety or a Williamsburg conferring with his excellency Governor Henry, and the looms which wove at all turned out cloth for Continental uniforms. Across the plant rows, where the negroes hoed, Groun, the overseer, with cowhide under his arta and his old Fontency bell mouth tower musket strapped on his back, still walked his borse, with ferret eyes under his broad brimmed hat But there was little leaf raised, and the wharfs at the foot of the lawn were overgrown with weeds.

Inside the great house there were the same candle lighted dining room, the high backed chairs, the tall, cumbrous clock, the portraits, the polished side board reflecting the slender stemmed glasses. But the meals were silent.

Anne's trouble bung over the house hold in a shadow that was not lighten ed by the presence of vaster ones near at hand. She had sorrowed with that festering sorrow that is self accusatory. And to know that never so few, aware of her part in that Philadelphia scene, believed her to have done a heroic thing was like an added death to her. For a time she had fled for refuge to her old passion for the cause. But the effort falled.

One day early in the new year, when frost like seed pearl, Colonel Tillotson brought to Gladden Hall the news of how "the old fox of Mount Vernon," by a wily double across the fcy Delaware, had taken the Hessians at Trenton. Anne heard it apathetically. To her despair, victory and defeat spelled the

"As she believes in us," replied the lady softly. "Colonel," she said keenly, "you have heard news."

"Anne had better not know. 'Twill do her no possible good."

"Colonel," said the lady decisively, "In this I must have my way. I am going to tell her just as fast as I can." She rose, laid aside her knitting, took up a candle and left him standing dubi-ously before the fire. The light came back to Anne like the spring sun. The great horror was gone, and in spite of the war's gloom Gladden Hall grew more cheerful again. She devoured the columns of the Gazettes and read eagerly letters which came to Henry from abroad.

These fold her how the Reprisal, lodging the British sloops of war, bad anded Benjamin Franklin safely at Nantes, of his meeting there with Beaumarchais and of his reception in Paris at the little hotel in the Rue Vieille du Temple, where a mercantile sign of 'Roderique Hortalez & Co." hid a pleasant conspiracy whose object was the furnishing of war supplies to the Amerlean colonists, and whose silent partners were a prime minister and a king. Somewhere, she thought, there in his own land perhaps Armand was safe, not believing in her, but free and un-condemned. The sound of war came nearer when Howe's fleet sailed into the Chesapeake singed glebe and copse, snow fell and purified the earth stains. And at last Virginia knew that Burgoyne had been Solution of the corner of che corner of the corner of Caston in the Philadelphia had been evacuated; that Philadelphia had been evacuated; that the corner of the Caston in the castor of the Caston in the Caston i

Virginia bore her burdens uncom plainingly, giving of her substance to the struggle, while the slaves which

"John the Baptist," demanded Anne sternly one day after Groum had reported that scarce fifty slaves remained in the quarters, "an the British come here, are you going to run away too?" "Mis' Anne," he complained appealingly, "don' yo' know no 'spectable nigger gwine ter list'n ter dem shif'less trash whut go ramshacklin' erroun' widout no homes? Dec ain' no 'count. Yo' couldn' swap 'em off fo' shucks. Yo' knows I ain' nuvver gwine leabe de plantation whar I wus drug up. Dat Cornwallts! Huh! Dis nigger smell de brimstone whut's huntin' fo' him." When the sky looked blackest came General Nathanael Greene into the south, young, light hearted and eager.

And what did he not accomplish? He welded anew the scattered remnants of Gates' army, fanned North Carollnian Whiggery into a blaze, beat Tarleton, sent Cornwallis back, breathing hard, to the seacoast. It was the end of the second campaign. "What will King George do now?" Anne asked Henry jubilantly.

His face was very grave as he answered: 'There is only one thing left.' 'Tis a stroke at the heart of the rebellion. And that heart is here in Virginia." He guessed truly.

There were hasty preparations for flight throughout the lower peninsula on that snow shod day when the traitor Arnold's fifty ships came to anchor off Jamestown Island. The sky was a celling of translucent gray. The stubby cedars trailed sweeping boughs of crystaled beryl, and every shrub was cased in argent armor. Fleet horsemen had ridden from Williamsburg in all directions rousing the frozen countryside. At noon Anne took her place in the charlot beside Mrs. Tillotson, bound for Dr. Walker's of Castle Hill, far enough north to be beyond the reach of the invaders. Her aunt was to fare even farther, to Berkeley.

They waved brave goodbys through tears to the little group of house negroes whimpering on the porch. Rashleigh was to go with the remaining servants to Brandon, Mammy Evaline was left in charge of the place, and John the Baptist, her son, was to care for the horses and run them off on approach of the British. The house linear and silver Anne had buried with her own hands, and the family port It was a sad journey, but one performed that day by more than one household. Colonel Tillotson rode a part of the way beside the coach. "'Twill not be for long," he insisted cheeringly. "I have assurance from Mr. Henry that Washington will send troops before spring breaks. He thought it would be General Lafayette the young French ton himself could come!" he added fer-But his wife was not to be comforted "Colonel," she cried brokenly, "I feel sure we shall never see Gladden Hall again." More than once before spring came tiptoeing down the trees Anne looked out to the north from quiet Castle Hill, homesick for a sight of Greenway Court and Baron Fairfax, Weakness and age had at last sent the old man to his chair, and he sat through the long days sorrowfully putient, as his ancestor, the hero of Naseby fight, sat at Denton in Yorkshire, waiting the coming of the victorious banners of the Howe's fleet sailed into the Chesapeaks and when Henry, summoned in haste from Hanover, called out the militia. She watched them march through Williamsburg, sixty-four companies strong, but the fleet and the army it carried sailed on to beat back Washington at Brandywine, to enter Philadelphia and turn the grave town into an orgy of Tory rejoicing.

So the months passed in alternate hope and despair. Spring unfurled, summer dropped its blooms, autumn singed clobe and comes arow fell and ingression of $19.96 costs, and in favor of W. C. entrapped in the northern forests; that Philadelphia had been evacuated; that the cord which was to encircle the throat of the rebellion had snapped; that France had recognized independence and made a treaty of alliance with the United States.

There followed a closer campaign when Lord Germaine, the king's war minister, having failed to strangle the monster, attacked its extremities, when the redcoats swept into the southern harbors, when Savannah and Augusta fell, when Lincoln's army was caught at Charlestown and Gates routed at Camden, and these were the south's darkest days.

It knew there was no hope from the army in the north—meager, ill clothed, half starved, without magazines, arsenals or credit. Washington lay watching like a hawk Clinton's 10,000 men at New York, hoping for an effective force from France, waiting with the sublime patience which more than all else made him a great soldier.
