SIGNS OF THE TIMES

The enormous vote in New York for W. R. Hearst, the advocate of municipal and government ownership of public utilities, furnishes a mile post for progress that must not be ignored by thinking citizens.

TELEGRAPHIC NOTES

Election news—McClellan elected in New York, 500 plurality over Hearst. Latter has already contested.

Tom Johnson again mayor of Cleveland and Ohio democrats and legislators. Mayor Weaver, reform, elected in Philadelphia and Pennsylvania democrats elect state treasurer.

THE MARKETS

This morning's market reports, compiled from Portland quotations, are:

Valley Wheat, new, 74 and 75. Barley—feed, $21.00; brewing, $22.1; rolled, $22.1 and $23. Oats, White, $25 and $26 per ton.

He Did and He Didn't. The rather foppish old gentleman had been wriggling uneasily in his seat for ten minutes.

JIMMIE'S COOK

By EPES W. SARGENT

Copyright, 1905, by Epes W. Sargent

"Come in," said Jimmie Caswell, a little embarrassed. "You see, the place isn't fixed up very well, but I haven't had any one to attend to things for a week."

"Help is hard to get," admitted Grace Gorham. "But I'm very lucky," commented Jimmie, regarding the brown hair that peeped under the dainty hat.

"Now, about my place," said the girl briskly. "How much do you pay?" "Four dollars a week," said Jimmie promptly.

"I never would use all that," she gasped. "I don't suppose you will need more than a couple of dollars a week."

"Oh, yes, you will," declared Jimmie. "The last girl couldn't get along with that, even. She used to touch me for more every Friday regularly; never could imagine what she bought with it."

"She must have been very hard on ribbons," suggested Miss Gorham. "Some girls are. Even at that, she shouldn't use up $10 worth."

"What have the ribbons to do with the expense?" asked Jimmie curiously. "She couldn't spend it for paper," explained Miss Gorham.

"Oh, no," he interrupted. "She had to get bread and meat and things like that."

"I think I'll have to," she answered shyly. Then with a sudden flash of humor, "If only because you look so forlorn when your rooms have been servantless for a week."

"The blessings of Cupid be upon the mistake," said Jimmie softly. "I think I'll give that hall boy $5, because I liked him for making you uncomfortable that morning."

As a specimen of what candidates for parliamentary honors in England have occasionally to put up with from their supporters the following little incident is worth recording:

Visiting a north country colliery during the men's dinner hour, a certain candidate was advised by his agent to ask "old Ben," a supporter who happened to work at the pit, to say a few words to his mates.

After some little persuasion the old man agreed to address his fellow workmen on the candidate's behalf, and this is what he said:

"Well, mates, I ain't a goin' ter tell ye as we've gotten a real straight, fair, honest candidate. You knows as well as I does as there ain't no sich thing as an honest politician breathin'."

"As stenographer" she finished. "As cook," insisted Jimmie firmly. "I distinctly told them to send up a cook."

"The hall boy said it was three flights up," she went on. "What has the hall boy to do with it?" he asked curiously.

"For answer, she drew a clipping from her pocketbook. It was an advertisement for a stenographer and gave the house address, but no name. Jimmie immediately became conscious of his dressing gown.

"What do you find the most difficult task?" asked the idle friend. "The hardest thing about my job," the all around clerk replied, "is going on with my work when I have drawn my pay in advance."

Mrs. Myrtle Stephen Keeney, of Blackfoot, Idaho, formerly of Forest Grove, died last week, from heart disease.

"Didn't you understand?" the counter questioned, unending a trifle. "To be perfectly frank," he said honestly, "I never heard a word. I was so surprised to find you here that my head was in a whirl."

"My father has a theory that his daughter should be capable of her self support. I am to have the old home on Madison avenue if I can get and hold a position for three months. This morning was my first application."

"But what was it you asked?" he persisted. "I asked you if you really thought I looked like a cook," she said, with a little laugh.

"And I said 'Yes,'" he cried contritely. "What a fool you must have taken me for!"

"Then you admit your mistake?" she asked smilingly. "What Jimmie answered was not to the point and wholly unworthy of recital. There are times when even a confirmed bachelor may grow suddenly foolish, and through that dinner Jimmie would have rivalled even a college lad making love to his first widow."

A more important conversation, and one more worthy of record, was held a few weeks later in the Gorham library.

"You see, I am at sea again on the servant question. The girl drank everything in the house that was bottled, even the cooking sherry."

"Why don't you go and live at a hotel?" she said. "Now that you have come into all that money through the sale of your western property, you do not need to keep bachelor hall—on 'ten dollars a week for all material,'" she quoted.

"I've a better idea than that," he declared seriously; "one my aunt gave me. I think I'll hire a housekeeper."

"What will you pay her?" she demanded, her eyes twinkling at the memory of Jimmie's serious parody on bargaining.

"Love and affection and other valuable considerations, as the legal documents say," he answered promptly. "And as you were an applicant for a place you shall have first chance—will you, dear?" He had dropped his banter and his voice had become dangerously tender.

"I think I'll have to," she answered shyly. Then with a sudden flash of humor, "If only because you look so forlorn when your rooms have been servantless for a week."

"The blessings of Cupid be upon the mistake," said Jimmie softly. "I think I'll give that hall boy $5, because I liked him for making you uncomfortable that morning."

It Worked All Right, But 'Twas One on Him

"THERE is a woman up in the front of the car that hasn't paid her fare," said the conductor to the man in the rear seat. "But I can't place her."

"Perhaps I can give you a pointer," said the helpful man. "Pick out the woman that tugs her hatpins all the time. This is the latest wrinkle of the female street car pirate. Reading her neighbor's newspaper and gazing into futurity are out of date. Everybody got on to those tricks. But the woman that beats her way has to do something to hide her guilt, so she fiddles with her hatpins."

"Maybe you are right," said the conductor. "Anyhow, I'll try."

After a little he reported to the helpful man. "That worked all right," he said. "She owned up. She said you would pay for her."

"Me?" exclaimed the helpful man. "What have I got to do with it?"

"Everything, apparently. She happened to look back and said she knew you and that it would be all right. There she is now, standing up and nodding at you. Know her?"

"Yes," said the man weakly. "She is my wife."

A well known evangelist is fond of telling how at the close of one of his most stirring addresses he approached a big, stolid looking German in the congregation who had paid the closest attention to the discourse. Thinking that he had perhaps made some impression on the man, the evangelist said to him:

"Are you a Christian?" "Nein; Sherman," was the reply. "Oh, German! Well, would you not like to become a Christian and work for the Master?"

The man shook his head and said: "Nein; I have yout got a shob to drive an ice wagon!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

Wanted Energy. Sometimes head and heels work well together, but it was not so in a case reported in a neighboring state. Sam, a colored man, was an hour late, and his employer asked him to explain.

"Yes, sah, I'll explain, sah," Sam replied. "Well, what excuse have you?" "I was kicked by a mule on my way here, sah."

"That ought not to have detained you an hour, Sam, if you were able to come at all."

"Well, it wouldn't have if he'd only kicked me in dis direction. You see, boss, he kicked me dis other way."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Wood Tick. A good clock's works were all of wood. So a good wood tick would be. A wood tick came from a wood near by. The wood tick would tick, and the wood wood tick.
