HIGH LICENSE IS TO PREVAIL IN THIS CITY

Raised From Four Hundred to Five Hundred per Year

LIMIT THE SALOONS TO THREE

One Saloon to Every Five Hundred Population

The city council met Tuesday evening and discussed the proposition of saloon license, and it was decided that the city would not license another saloon until the population increased. Several speeches were made on the subject and it was finally voted to raise the present $400 license fee per annum to $500, thus raising the city revenue from this source $300 each calendar year.

The council practically voted to not grant another license until the population was much larger, basing one saloon for every five hundred people, or fraction thereof. The liquor dealers are not complaining about the raise particularly, as they argue that the extra one hundred dollars each must pay will be made back through the absence of a fourth resort.

They were paroled out like so many elders at a camp meeting or at a conference. He was married to Helen Chalmers in 1864, and came to Oregon in 1880. He purchased a farm from his father-in-law and has made his home there ever since. His neighborly disposition, jovial manner and cordial greeting gained him many friends and his care to not give careless offense made him no enemies. His religious convictions were very strong, although deafness kept him from church attendance for some years. For 26 years he had been a member of the Tualatin Plains Pres. Church. The wife and two children have passed away, leaving three children to mourn his loss—William, James and Miss Anna.
