WHY IT WAS CHAMBERLAIN

Oregon is over 22,000 republican, and yet, Oregon has seen fit to re-elect Gov. Chamberlain to succeed himself. This meant a change of thousands of votes and even partisan democrats did not in their heart believe he could be elected, although ever so worthy. But the Governor's chief strength lay in the fact that he gave the State a prudent, careful, and honest administration, and partisan politics was not as strong as appreciation—and never will be, for that matter. There were many republicans voting for Chamberlain feeling that Mr. Withycombe would have made a good governor, but, on the other hand, they felt that Chamberlain was entitled to another term, and they so voted. Besides, the Governor struggled with a legislative body that was like a bunch of wild colts, and he held them down admirably. He wrestled with the land grabbers, and even if he had republican help through the other two members of the board it must be remembered that the state land board had done nothing to stop the fleecing in prior years. Other republicans felt that Chamberlain should be governor as a matter of protection. They saw the land sharks trying to defeat the governor; they saw men like Napoleon Davis trying to defeat him; they saw men like Pete D'Arcy trying to retire him; they saw the great Booth-Kelley Lumber Company trying to kill the governor's power and turn him out of office. All these things, together with Chamberlain's personal popularity, connected again with the fact that Chamberlain is matchless on the rostrum, conspired to defeat Mr. Withycombe, who is a worthy citizen, and who doubtless would have made a good governor.

Chamberlain's election is not a democratic victory in any sense. It simply was the democratic party's good fortune to have in Chamberlain a man implicitly trusted by the majority of the voters. The cry that his defeat would be a rebuke to Roosevelt fell on unheeding ears, for the cry lost its strength when Binger Herman received 7,000 majority two years ago. This may be the last democratic governor that Oregon will have for years and it is fortunate for Oregon that he is a man who weighs his acts well before moving in public affairs. Chamberlain has received a vote of confidence that has staggered politicians, and the Argus sincerely feels that he will not violate any trust reposed in him by the people of the state.

COUNTY INTELLIGENCE

Now listen—in Washington County the general appropriation bill was vetoed by a vote of 1402 to 860, while in other parts of the state the bill was sustained. That the people of the state wanted to defeat the bill goes without saying. But—and here is the meat in the cocoon—in the other counties of the state not a newspaper advocated its defeat, with but one or two exceptions. The reason is apparent. The republican papers did not enlighten the voters on the matter; not a word was said; the democratic papers in the state hadn't sense enough to make the bill clear—in fact, they scarcely mentioned it. Not a republican paper in this county mentioned the bill. It was the scheme of the political bosses to not have it mentioned. Here, then, it was left for the Argus to make the fight, and the result was a vote against the many grafts, and the Argus is proud of the Washington County vote. It shows that people here are acting intelligently on matters of taxation. The bill should have been defeated. It is a piece of robbery. Had all papers in the state been as candid on the bill as the Argus the next legislature would have been afraid of "riding" the people with useless appropriations. Again, the Argus thanks the good people of this county for its intelligent expression on this

AMENDMENTS

Sustaining the appropriation bill, Yes, 860; Against the bill, 1402. Woman suffrage, Yes, 992; Against, 1740. Barlow toll road, Yes, 781; No, 1831. Local option amendment, Yes, 1098; No, 1621. Constitutional amendment, providing method of amending constitution, Yes, 1684; No, 681. Giving cities and towns right to make own charter, Yes, 1832; No, 686. To put state printer on salary, Yes, 2216; No, 290. To permit referendum on parts of general laws, Yes, 1735; No, 523. Prohibiting free passes, Yes, 2050; No, 491. License upon gross earnings sleeping car, refrigerator, oil and other corporations, Yes, 2412; No, 216. License on telegraph and telephone companies, gross earnings, Yes, 2416; No, 231. The referendum of laws is the proper idea, but so long as newspapers do not familiarize the voters with the details it can be given no fair test. The Argus notes with satisfaction, however, that Washington County voted very intelligently on the majority of the pending measures—and that is more than other counties can show. Woman's suffrage was badly beaten over the state, but the advocates say they will try it again next election. The papers over the state lent a great deal of encourage-

SAFETY AND PROFIT

Safety and profit are the two important things to consider in selecting a bank. Money is such a hard thing to get and so hard to keep, that it is folly to place it where it will not be safe. Thus those who Tom Word is beaten in Portland by a bare four votes, and the redoubtable sheriff promises a contest. Tom Word made good his pledges, but the great partisan majority was too many for him. Besides, the notorious element all supported Stevens. Portland wants to be a wide open town. Argus suggests that Tom Word would make a fine chief of police. How about it, Mayor Lane? Born, June 7, 1906, to Daniel Binkley and wife, of Hillsboro, a 10-pound son.
