LONG & MCKINNEY

Ten years ago the great corporations of our country were out for the election of their candidates, and their animus was "patriotism." They spent millions of dollars to defeat Bryan and did not hesitate to call him an anarchist, a repudiationist, and everything that was vile. They have since proved to the public that they are, as a rule, a set of thieves of the worst type. They have robbed the living and the dead in the name of patriotism, and the silly newspapers, both metropolitan and backwoods, herded each portly corporationist as worthy of the hall of fame. All were scoundrels save those who supported what the corporations supported; all were rebels who wanted what the corporations, both bank and trust of all kinds, did not want. Bryan supporters were called liars when they said that millions were sent out to corrupt the popular will—but it transpires that the charge was only too true. As a prominent republican said ten years ago—"Bryan is just ten years ahead of time." It begins to look as though he was right, and that Bryan is coming into his own.

When Bryan charged that the big fellows who were spending money to defeat him were the true anarchists he told the truth, and recent events have proved it; when he told the people that the big corporations were the interests that were violating the law he told what has since transpired in history; and when he asked for the confidence of the American people he only asked what he was worthy of getting—but the very best he could do was to poll a majority of the Caucasian votes in 1896, and nearly as many in the 1904 campaign. But all this, of course goes for nothing. Roosevelt has part way gone where Bryan set the pace as to railroads; time has brought about the truth of Bryan's statements in many other instances—but the corporations will be against him in the future as they have been in the past. There is too much Jackson about Bill Bryan.

TIMES MAN AWAKENS

One of the absurdities of the election is the outcome of the vote on the big appropriation bill which was held up two years ago by the appeal of the referendum. It now appears as if a majority voted "yes" on that question. The effect is to legalize the appropriation and all the schools may be maintained and the appropriations for new normal school buildings will be available at once. It is safe to guess that not one voter in ten was in favor of those new buildings, but they have voted for them just the same. The voters are using their newly acquired power of veto very absurdly when they approve by their votes what they denounced so generally with their mouths.—Forest Grove Times.

If the Times will look at this county's vote on appropriation bill he will find that it was badly beaten. The vote, however, should have been larger for the veto. The Times, like other county republican papers, feared to advise voters, because it would practically be advising a vote for Chamberlain. If the Times man had awakened before the election and pointed out the absurdity of sustaining the graft, it would not now be criticizing voters.

THE DEACON RECOGNIZES A FRIEND

"Tis like the June we know so well—
Jes' like the June we know so well—
All filled with song an' fune,
Now covered o'er with joy and tears—
An' yet I hear the croon;
The croon that bubbled in my heart,
Back fifty years, dear Sue,
When I was twenty-four, an' past,
An' you were twenty-two!

What They All Said After the Wedding

THE Clergyman—Until death do ye part.
The Bridegroom—At last, oh, my darling!
The Bride—Don't, Bert; there's a dear. You'll rump me hair.
The Father—It's twenty-five years since I was fixed up, Bert, my boy, and I trust you'll—well, of course, the rough goes with the smooth.
The Mother—Oh, my darling, it's so hard to part with you, and—be sure to get a seat facing the engine.
The Best Man—And I—er—er—I—er—hope—er—that is—I thank you all on behalf of the ladies.
The Oldest Friend—I've known her since she was in short dresses. Oh, you needn't blush, my dear; you had very pretty—
Mary—And I wish yer all happiness, miss.
John—As I'm sure, miss and Mr. 'Erbert, we all do.
One of the Crowd—She ain't a patch on my Susan.
Another of the Crowd—Don't 'e look cross? I bet she'll 'ave a nice temper to put up with.
The Coachman—Any more luggage, miss—beg pardon, ma'am?
The Guard—I'll lock it, sir, and see as no one gets in. Thank ye, sir.—Pick Me Up.

Still on Schedule.

As everybody knows, Mark Twain is an authority on steamboating on the Mississippi and has many tales to tell of the vicissitudes of travel in the early days. But the humorist declares that during his days as a Mississippi pilot the very worst boat on the river was the Stephen J. Hill. Natives never used her. Strangers and tenderfeet were sometimes invited aboard.
One afternoon a thick fog settled down, and the Stephen J. Hill had to tie up to the bank for the night. One of the passengers said to the captain: "It is too bad we are going to be late, captain."
"We ain't going to be late," replied the captain.
"But I thought," said the passenger, "we were going to tie up here all night."
"So we are," answered the captain, "but that ain't going to make us late. We don't run so close to time as all that."—Woman's Home Companion.

SAFETY AND PROFIT

Safety and profit are the two important things to consider in selecting a bank. Money is such a hard thing to get and so hard to keep, that it is folly to place it where it will not be safe. Thus those who are saving money naturally wish it to earn more money. Therefore, the financial institution which combines safety and profit is a desirable depository. Such is offered by the Hillsboro Commercial Bank.
