IN THE LIMELIGHT

Ten years ago the corporation influences of the country spat millions to beat Bryan. These agencies, directed by men who preferred a debased price for labor and product rather than a "debased" dollar, made heroic claims of patriotism; they were interested in the dollars that were, rather than the results that were to be earned by those who make commerce and the social fabric a possibility. In other words, they wished debased labor and debased men as measured in "sound dollars." They paid for results, and they reaped them. They preached purity and were presented with pelf. Grafters themselves, they promoted grafting. The electorate was corrupted, and the days of Robespierre, Marat and Danton were more tolerant of opposition than the patriots of 1896, who branded all political opposition as insanity, vandalism, repudiation and carrion. We all remember this state of facts. Today, matters are changed. A republican president, while accomplishing little in the main, has, in company with muckrakers, uncovered the maggots of commercialism, and their wriggling and stench have shocked the Union—that is to say, shocked many who unhesitatingly accepted the plutocratic cry of ten years ago. Today Bryan is known for his absolute worth, and for the acumen he displayed when he called the turn of the cog-dicers who opposed him. Today the world knows that Bryan was unflinchingly beaten by rampant coercion, greed and rapacity. Today the promoters of debased labor, debased production; the promoters of a commercial feudalism that self-respected citizens, whether republican, democrat, socialist, or whatnot, know at their true worth, stand out in the limelight as traducers of our country, and—sorrowful in the extreme—we have yet to hear the old patriotic editors who supported them acknowledge the wrong. They simply satisfy themselves with the platitude of "sound money and sanity," and let it go at that. They are still strong in the faith that debased product and labor is better than debased money—and this is certainly true as regards those who intelligently fought, and were benefited, by the defeat of Bryan.

The proposition of the Oregon Condensed Milk Company to call a meeting of the patrons of the institution and have them select a person from their number to test the milk which is delivered, is one that should manifest an earnest of the company to do the right thing to those from whom they get their milk supply. The company proposes to have the dairymen do the selecting, and they will pay him wages for the work. A call for their meeting is found in another place in this issue, and here is a chance for co-operative work to their hearts' content.

Golf in Cactus Center.

When a tenderfoot was spotted, acting queer-like in the hills. He'd a ball of gutta percha and was putting it in his ticks. Just a-knockin' it to glory with a bunch of crooked sticks.

Well, we went up there quite cur'us, and we watched him paste the ball. Till a heh'n' fer to try it seemed to get a-holt of all.

And at last Packasaddle Stevens asked to give the thing a swat.

And we gathered round to see him show the stranger what was what.

Well, the golfer stuck the sphere on a little pile of dirt.

And Packasaddle swiped and swatted, but he didn't do no hurt.

He barked his shirt terrific, and he broke his little stick.

And when he heard a snicker his guns came out too quick.

We dropped behind the cactus with some holes clipped in our clothes.

While the golfer for the sky line wagged his checkered board home.

And when we took home Stevens and three others that was hurt.

The golf ball still was settin' on its little pile o' dirt.

So we ain't no new St. Andrews, and we hope no golfer thinks

He can cut loose here in Cactus with a set of oatmeal links.

We go in for games that's quiet and stir up no blood and fuss.

And down in Cactus Center poker's good enough fer us.

Matter of Shape.

Hoax—I hear that the corset trust is in a bad way.

Joax—Yes, but it'll get things in good shape after awhile.—Chicago Journal.

Her Reason.

The other day I was told of a little girl who attended a distribution of prizes given by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. She had won, you must know, a book as a reward for writing the best essay on the subject given, and, with the other successful children, was undergoing a viva voce examination.

"Well, my dear," said the gentleman who had given away the prizes, "can you tell me why it is cruel to dock horses' tails and trim dogs' ears?"

"Because," answered the little girl, "what God had joined together let no man put asunder."

Trade and Profession.

Dr. Bull, the celebrated surgeon, was under the hands of the skillful but talkative barber whom he was accustomed to patronize.

"Ah, doctor," sighed the tonsororial artist, "I wish I had learned your trade."

"Well, I don't know," said the great surgeon reflectively; "yours is a pretty good profession, isn't it?"—Woman's Home Companion.

His Excuse.

"Mike, you are a long time at market this morning. Why didn't you bring back that dressed duck quicker?"

"Sure, madam, it was a faymale duck that the mon was after fillin' yer order wid, an' ye know how long it takes a faymale to dress!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Room For Hope.

"I have been misquoted," said the new congressman.

"Well," answered the experienced statesman, "wait and see how it turns out. Sometimes a man is lucky to be misquoted."—Washington Star.

Feary Versus Wellman.

"I'm afraid Feary will not understand about this Wellman airship that is to beat him to the pole."

"Why not?"

"Because it will be over his head."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Forced to Live.

"Before we were married you said you'd die for me."

"I'd do it, too, only you have kept me so poor we can't afford any funeral expenses."—Houston Post.

Found at Last.

Explorer Bugg—Hi, there; I've discovered the north pole!—Woman's Home Companion.

Unkind.

"You do wrong to suspect that man. He always pursued an upright life."

"Then I'm sure he never overtook it!"—Baltimore American.

Wonderful Work of a Watch.

In perfect running order the balance wheel of a timepiece makes 18,000 vibrations per hour. The number of miles a year the movement of a correctly adjusted balance wheel will equal is 3,558. To make this run less than one-tenth of a drop of oil is consumed. In order to keep a watch in proper condition it is advisable to have the timepiece thoroughly overhauled semiannually. The life of a watch is lengthened by having it "house cleaned" every six months.

The King of England and His Mother's Picture

KING EDWARD VII. of England is known to be the most democratic of titled rulers, though he is now not quite as free to follow his unceremonious bent as when he was Prince of Wales. In the days before his accession to the throne when driving unattended in a dogcart along a country road he met an old woman wearily carrying a heavy basket.

"Climb in," said the prince, and the good dame gladly accepted the invitation.

"What have you in your basket?" asked the unidentified prince.

"Eggs, butter and vegetables," was the reply.

"I'm fond of fresh eggs," said the prince, "and if you'll let me have the lot I'll give you my mother's picture."

"Your mother's picture?" exclaimed the old lady, "What good would that do me?"

"Oh, you never know," laughed the prince, and as he helped his passenger dismount at the door of her cottage he laid his hand on the basket and handed the astonished market woman a golden sovereign stamped with the effigy of Queen Victoria.—Woman's Home Companion.

For Several Minutes.

"Didn't you and Mr. Spoonington have trouble of some kind last night?" asked her anxious mother.

"Yes; he said my lips were like luscious cherries and my ears like little shells."

"Well? Was that all?"

"No; he said my hair had the fragrance of apple blossoms, and when I wouldn't let him bury his nose in it for fear he might loosen my switch he seemed to be really put out, and for several minutes we were just as cool to each other as we could be."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Permission Granted.

The eastern manager of a large western manufacturing concern has a benignly clerical appearance that commands confidence. He was standing on a corner in the shopping district of Philadelphia waiting for a car when a woman, handsomely gowned and evidently a stranger, approached him and said inquiringly:

"I wish to go to Broad street station."

"Instantly he replied in a tone of indulgent seriousness:

"Very well, you can go this time, but don't ever, ever ask me again."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Useful.

"Don't you think every statesman should cultivate a manner of great dignity?"

"A manner of great dignity," answered Senator Sorghum, "is an invaluable adjunct. It prevents people from asking bothersome questions for fear of seeming impertinent."—Washington Star.

Poor Father.

"I suppose I ought to ask your father for your land?"

"Well, yes, it might please him, and it can't do any hurt. Of course it wouldn't be at all necessary if mother were home."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Willie's Thought.

Pa—Well, what is it now?

Willie—Pa, is a thousand legger a bird?

Pa—Certainly not; it's an insect.

Willie—Pa, why ain't turkeys thousand leggers?—Philadelphia Press.

Such Impudence!

"Is there any answer, boy?"

Messenger Boy—I don't know; I didn't have time to read it.
