The Coast & Eastern Railroad bubble has burst and the secretary has quit his job. Bre'r Wilsey, who built 1280 miles of road through the mountain fastnesses of Oregon, but confined his actual construction to "13-ems pica" with nothing nearer steel than mergenthaler, still maintains that the line will be built. This is the road that Bre'r Teal built last Spring in the Portland evening newspapers, and it will be remembered that Hillisboro harbored the engineers for two weeks or more while they ran lines all over the creek beds, causing a general shortage of native quails by reason of breaking up so many nests. Seriously, here is a matter for the Rod & Gun clubs to take up should Bre'r Wilsey insist in sending men out here again next Spring. The quail crop must be maintained.

Herring! Herring! Just received some of the finest new pack salt herring. Our friends who know a good article will be pleased to know that we have even a superior to the one we had last season. Try them. —J. A. Messinger.

Assessor Wilcox is now working on his present ownership books, getting ready for the next season's assessments. To complete this he will commence on the records of deeds filed since last March, and carry them on up to next March—and then he will have, in 9 volumes of plats and names, every piece of land, in what section it is, and by whom owned, in the entire county As a matter of fact he has for the last fifteen years an absolute chain of title, with the exception of dates, of all the real properties in the county. Laymen, as a rule, do not know this, but the attorneys who abstract find his office a very valuable place to dig up title chains.

The Deacon and a Pioneer Race Horse

As ol' Lute Lindsay used to say:
"That hoss can win most any day"—
I never wuz much on hoss-racin',
But if there ever wuz a hoss
That cud set my blood a-pacin'
An' make me smile at loss,
'Twuz a hoss that wuz here in pi'neer days—
Jim Merritt wuz his name!
He used to run at county fairs
Out here in ol' Hilltown;
An' though he ran a leetle lame
An' windin', like a pair o' stairs—
No hoss cud trim him down.
Ol' Jim wuz all the craze,
An' he cud run sum, you can bet!
Ol' 'Stave Scoggin an' Pat Powers
Picked the ol' hoss up
An' ol' Bill Tompkins rode him
Whether in sunshine or showers,
The two winnin' many a cup—
An' Bill never had to goad him;
I c'n see him runnin' yet,
C'n see Bob Imbrie in the stand
A-holdin' up his outstretched hand,
A-pointin' at the posts;
Hear the boom-boom of the band;
Hear the voices shoutin' shrill
As ol' Jim Merritt clum the hill
Ahead of all the hosts
Of hosses—winkin' back at Bill,
An' stretchin' that long neck of his'n
Shinin' like a rainbow's prism—
An' sort o' sed: "Bill, they're licked!
Are they the best the hoss-men picked?"
An' then ol' Jim came sailin' in
Amid the musick, shouts an' din
An' yellin'. An' I felt sick,
While my eyes got dim
Because I hadn't nerve to stick
My money on the race hoss, Jim.
But Sue, she sed, as I mourned my loss:
"The idee! You! You bet on a hoss?
A sup'rintendent of a Sunday Skool—
Why Si, is it true I married a fool?"
But that wuz thirty years ago;
The hoss an' his rider is dead—
Bob Imbrie rests; Stave Scoggin, too,
An' the green mounds is their bed.
But if religion didn't forswear it
I'd be bettin' yet on ol' Jim Merritt,
If the ol' hoss wa'n't well-bred!
But Jim grew old, and cuddent run,
An' wuz finally bought by a son-of-a-gun
Who packed the trail to Tillamook;
Now, Jim had pride in his ol'-time pace,
An' cuddent stand the sad disgrace,
So, one day, when he cum to a crook
Of the trail leadin' over the hill
Where's a great deep canyon's face,
Ol' Jim, he went the suicide route
An' won another race—
Rolled down a bank; his light went out,
An' he died by a ripplin' rill,
Movin' his legs forrard an' back
Jes' as if agen, he wuz on' the track
On the ol' Hilltown fair ground—
With thousands watchin' in the stands,
A-shoutin' loud an' wavin' hands
As Jim another vict'ry lands—
No, Jim Merritt wuz never downed.

What Bowser Knows of Cats

Gives His Wife the Benefit of Some Investigations In Natural History.

FLY LIKES OUR SOCIETY

This Is Why Little Pest Seeks to Enter Houses—Queer Things About Horses and Cows.

[Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe.]

MR. BOWSER'S general demeanor was paternal as he came home to dinner and hung his hat on its accustomed peg. Mrs. Bowser was assured that it presaged something, but just what she could not guess. He treated her with fatherly consideration all through the meal, and it was not until its finish that he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, we have a family cat. You have no doubt seen her lie down many times?"

"About a million, I think," she replied.

"Then you must have noticed her turn around in a circle two or three times previous to lying down?"

"Yes."

"Why does she do it? Why do all cats do it?"

"Looking for a soft spot, I suppose."

"That's about the way I expected you to answer. Perhaps forty out of fifty men would have answered the same way. We have the lessons of nature right under our eyes all the time, and yet how few of us give them any attention! We look upon a naturalist with the greatest awe, and yet he is only a man who keeps his eyes open."

"If you had a house to run you would find that you had something else to do than to speculate as to why cats turn around," said Mrs. Bowser as she thought of the work she had done that day.

Why Cat Turns Round.

"I am twice as busy as you, and yet I speculate. I not only speculate, but I ascertain facts. The cat, as I may tell you, is descended to us from a wild state. She has never lost all her savagery. In her wild state she turns and surveys the locality for danger before seeking repose. That trait continues with her into domesticity. There you have it, and I hope you will remember it. In case a lady calls and there is a conversation about cats"—

HE WAS STRUCK BY THE WHEEL.

"There will be no conversation about cats," she interrupted.

"Then remember what I have told you for your own good. You have seen hundreds of flies trying to get into the house, haven't you?"

"That reminds me that we ought to have three new screens."

"Don't try to switch off on any tangents, Mrs. Bowser, but answer me why a fly wants to get into the house. He has all outdoors to himself. No traps or fly paper awaits him there. He can roam from Maine to California, and yet he is fool enough to want to get into the kitchen and be knocked down by the cook. Why is it? Did you ever give the matter a thought?"

"Several thoughts, Mr. Bowser. The fly finds a greater variety of food in the house. You don't find 'em in an empty house."

"Well spoken, but not the facts. A fly, Mrs. Bowser, is an insect of sentiment. He is not generally so taken, and that's where people make their mistake. While he appreciates the company of other flies he appreciates that of human beings more. If barred from human beings he takes to the horse or cow. His sole object in entering a house is to be near the cook or members of the family. Every time he is repulsed his feelings are hurt. I don't say you are guilty of murder every time you kill a fly, but I do contend that if people appreciated the situation of affairs there would be less fly killing. Take it and remember it that the fly would keep far from you if he wasn't lonely and did not wish for human society."

"And it's the same with the mosquito, I suppose?" she queried.

"Exactly. I am glad to see your interest increasing."

"But if the mosquito is seeking human sympathy why did you jump out of bed the other night and do all that swearing? Why did you bat at two or three in the room with the pillows? Why didn't you hang out a sign of 'Human Sympathy Found Here?'"

Can't Blame Mosquito.

"Don't run things into the ground, Mrs. Bowser. If the mosquito takes a bite or two while looking for human sympathy it's all in the way of graft and can't be blamed. I have no recollection of any such incident as you name. We have owned horses and cows."

"Yes."

"You have had every opportunity of studying them both."

"I remember when one of our cows kicked you over, and when one of the horses ran away with you."

"And you are probably sorry I didn't get killed. However, can you tell me if both lie down and get up the same way?"

"I should say they did. If they don't, what of it?"

"What of it? If you go to the store to buy tea and they give you catnip, what of it? A horse neighs and a cow bellows, and you might as well ask what of it. Can you answer the question I asked you?"

"They both lie down and get up the same way."

"They do nothing of the sort. A horse sinks down behind and a cow in front. A horse rises on his front legs and a cow on her hind ones. If a lady should ever call here"—

"We shall talk about the heathen, probably, instead of horses and cows."

"But why do these animals lie down and get up in different ways?" persisted Mr. Bowser. "You should learn for your own benefit."

"I'm sure I don't know."

Ways of Horse and Cow.

"Then I will proceed to inform you. A cow sinks down on her knees first that she may examine the grass and see if there are any bumblebees' nests around. A horse sinks down behind first that he may take a last look at the clouds and see what the weather is to be. In rising a cow is still looking for those nests, and the horse wants to know if there is going to be a thunderstorm that day. I ask no credit for what I am telling you, though it has cost me many years of observation. For instance, how many persons in this town could tell you why cows and horses switch their tails?"

"They do it to keep the flies off, of course."

"Ha, ha, ha! That was the very answer I expected. It is the very one most people would give, and yet it's wrong. The tail switching is an involuntary motion and is practiced when there isn't a fly within a mile. Let a man stand still, and he will put his hands into his pockets. Let him sit down, and he will cross one leg over the other. These are things you should think of, Mrs. Bowser. Any time you want to ask me any questions about natural history I"—

Mrs. B. Asks Questions.

"I want to ask a couple now. How many teeth has a horse, and why has a cow teeth only on one jaw?"

Mr. Bowser was bowled over in a minute, but he didn't stay bowled. He rallied and answered:

"A horse has thirty teeth, and any fool knows that a cow has teeth on both jaws."

"The male horse has fourteen teeth and the female only twelve, Mr. Bowser, while the cow has teeth only on one jaw, and that is the lower one. Can you tell me why this is so?"

"Because it isn't. It isn't so within forty rods."

"But it is. Any veterinary surgeon or work on anatomy will tell you so."

"Woman, don't try any tricks on me!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he turned red and white. "I sit down here this evening to give you a few lessons in natural history, and you try to turn the whole thing into sarcasm. You talk of corroboration. I will now go out and get such proofs that I am right and you are wrong as will bury you right out of sight. By thunder, but you have cheek!"

Mr. Bowser went to the butcher and was told that Mrs. Bowser was right. He went to a livery stable and was told the same thing. He went to a grocer, who had been a farmer, and was sat down on some more. As a last resort he visited his family druggist and got it in the neck again, and the druggist added:

"Bowser, make a thorough job of it and find out how many teeth an ass has got!"

He left the store boiling over and seeing red, but salvation was at hand. A boy and a wheelbarrow came running down the sidewalk at a 2:40 gait, and as Mr. Bowser didn't get out of the way he was struck by the wheel and rolled into the street, and when assisted home by two kind pedestrians he knew that Mrs. Bowser's solicitude for his welfare would prevent her having another word to say about horses or cows. Could Satisfy Them, Anyway, Making Faces

IT was Arbor day, and an entertainment in honor of it was being given in the little country school at Durham. When the programme was half over the youthful faces of the scholars shone with agreeable anticipation, for the very next number was to be a vocal solo by Miss Willet, a spinster of the town, who on many previous occasions had delighted the school with her singing.

There followed an impatient pause. Finally the teacher made this announcement:

"I am very sorry to say, children, that Miss Willet has been taken with a rather sudden hoarseness and will be unable to sing. She is willing, however, to recite a poem instead if you wish it. Do you?"

Disappointment flew into each little one's face at this change, and for a moment no one spoke. Then several boyish heads in the rear of the room became grouped as if in earnest conversation. Suddenly they parted, and Johnnie Marvin, a freckle faced, deep voiced scholar, stood up.

"Teacher," he declaimed, "if Miss Willet don't mind we'd rather have her git up an' try to sing, an' if her throat's too sore t' make a noise she kin make her funny faces anyway while the pianer plays the tune!"—Woman's Home Companion.

Yawns and the Man.

Travelers' tales which often add charm to the conversation of an agreeable person frequently render a bore more tiresome than ever, a fact that was amusingly illustrated by an occurrence in a Baltimore clubhouse not long ago.

"There I stood, gentlemen," the long winded narrator was saying, after droning on for an hour with reference to his trip to Switzerland—"there I stood, with the abyss yawning in front of me."

"Pardon me," hastily interjected one of the unfortunate men who had been obliged to listen to the story, "but was that abyss yawning before you got there?"—Harper's Weekly.

Always the Way.

"Don't you want to take a chance on this lovely silver shaving set?" asked the fair attendant at the church bazaar.

"Not I," replied Sinnex. "I'd never win that."

"But even if you don't shave yourself"—

"Oh, but I do; that's why I say I'd never win it. It's bound to go to some fellow who has no use for it."—Boston Transcript.

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "in Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) condition of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa, suppressed or absent monthly periods, arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and Anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON WITHIN AND FOR WASHINGTON COUNTY

Margaret Fairchild, Plaintiff, vs.
George S. Fairchild, Defendant.

To George S. Fairchild, defendant above named:—In the name of the State of Oregon, you are hereby notified that the Plaintiff herein has filed a complaint against you in the above entitled court and cause and you are hereby required to appear and answer the said complaint or file some appearance thereto on or before the last day prescribed by the order of publication hereof, to-wit: or before the 30th day of November, A. D., and if you fail so to appear and answer the complaint or file some appearance herein, the Plaintiff will cause your default to be entered and noted and will apply to the court for the relief prayed for in the complaint, to-wit: A decree forever dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and the Plaintiff and for such other relief as to the Court may seem proper, including permission to Plaintiff that she may resume her maiden name, to-wit: Margaret Minner.

The date of the first publication of this summons is Thursday, October 18th, 1906, and the last publication thereof is Thursday, the 29th day of November, 1906, and this summons is to be published on every Thursday of each week for a period of six successive weeks between said dates.

This summons is published by order of the Hon. Thomas A. McBride, Judge of the above entitled Court, made in Chambers on the 16th day of October, 1906.
