All this talk of referring appropriation bills to the voters is a matter of supererogation unless the newspapers of the state make a better fight for economy than they did in the last general election.

Roosevelt and Bryan are close together on primary ideas, these days. In 1896 when it was charged that millions were expended by the trusts to defeat the Nebraskan the statement was branded as a lie, unadulterated. That it was truth is now known to a certainty.

Senator Foraker is out after Roosevelt's scalp in Ohio, and the senator has nerve enough to let it go before Ohioans in a primary. Firebrand Joe may be wrong in his deductions, but he has nerve enough to fight in the open.

If Mr. Roosevelt, who so closely agrees with W. J. B., of Lincoln, really wants to do business with the trusts, the Argus suggests that he discharge his attorney general and appoint Mr. Bryan to that position in his cabinet.

Bryan democrats and Roosevelt republicans can now meet and talk over the situation without a Kilkenny disturbance. Fine!

Onion seeding promises to be late this year along the Tualatin river bottoms. High water again came the first of the week and there was overflow on a large percentage of the onion lands—and that reminds one that onions are now worth over three cents per pound for good quality.

For Sale: Fifty acres cleared land in the vicinity of Hillsboro, on rural mail and milk route; near telephone line. Fine location; good building site.—Inquire of Argus.

The county commissioners will meet with Judge Goodin next Saturday and let the contract for building the Scholls Bridge across the Tualatin, near the Groner & Rowell sawmill and tile factory. The old structure has become so aged that it has outlived its strength.

Ex-sheriff Henry P. Ford, of Portland, was out yesterday, a witness before the circuit court in a case between two Multnomah county parties.

Carrier on Rural Route No. 3 out of this city has a handsome new delivery cart and Mr. Poole himself blossomed out in a bran new uniform.

Ladies' knit and muslin underwear, latest patterns; embroideries and lace—finest line in the county, at H. Wehrung & Sons.

John Kierni, of Cedar Mill, was up yesterday, on business.

For sale: 10 pounds extra select Yellow Danver onion seed.—J. N. Miller, Hillsboro, Ore.

Geo. Miller, of below Reedville, was in the city this afternoon.

The Discovery of His Kingdom.

By LOUISE J. STRONG.

She gave him a cheery greeting as she passed, which Deardorf returned with stiff embarrassment. Women always embarrassed him, which fact had been construed into a dislike of the sex, thus accounting for his bachelorhood.

might watch her down the street. Much less would any one have imagined that every time he looked into her cauld womanly eyes his lonely, unattained man's soul clamored for the home and companionship he saw therein.

SUCH CONTEMPLATION WAS ALL THEIR LOT IN LIFE ALLOWED.

the eyes of all men, and he was not surprised, only startled by the stopping of his heart, at what he overheard from a couple of young men behind him.

"She will make him a sweet little wife—the lucky dog!" one exclaimed. "The sweetest in the world," the other assented. "And there's nothing for the rest of us but hunting wedding presents. Come on."

They went their way, and with strangely blurred vision he stumbled up the stairs and through the gloom of the hall to his rooms at the end. Her door was opposite, and as he fumbled with his key he glanced across furtively with an odd sense of guilt for the accustomed thrill that shook him.

But subsequent reflection persuaded him that his departure at this juncture might be connected with her marriage and excite comment. He felt that he must remain until the "lucky dog" had carried her away, and—he blushed painfully at the thought—he must procure the inevitable wedding present if he would not be conspicuous.

Then followed strenuous days and sleepless nights of vain endeavor to decide upon something, with bitter reviling of the custom which forbade his presenting her with a goodly check in lieu of an article which would probably be but an unwelcome duplicate.

He hunted the shops and stores, confounding himself uselessly with the multitude and variety of their wares. He grew thin and heavy eyed under the burden, thereby arousing in her an anxious solicitude he was too absorbed to perceive. In despair he sought advice of the office boy.

"Billy," he asked that versatile young person, "what would you give to a lady for a wedding present?" "Aw, that's easy! Something she'd like, of course," Billy said airily. Then he explained: "I mean, sir, something you've heard her say she'd like. That's the only kind of present worth having, only folks won't give 'em. I've tried it, a-hinting and a-binting what I want Christmas and birthdays, and I always get some old thing I wouldn't take if I could help it." Billy sniffed.

That seemed an eminently sensible suggestion to Deardorf, and he presented a grateful dollar to Billy for the idea, realizing when he came to make application of it that the only object of which he had any knowledge concerning her desires was undoubtedly questionable regarded as a wedding present. Still, according to Billy's decision, it would be a pleasure to her.

He had one day chanced upon her standing behind two little girls who were engrossed in the contemplation of an entrancing toy tea set in a shop window. It was obvious that such contemplation was all their lot in life allowed, and she was fingering her slim purse doubtfully, with moist eyes.

"I was wondering if I might not give it to them for the sake of a lonely little girl whose one desire in life was a vain longing for a tiny tea set," she said as she stopped.

"Let me," he begged, expanding under the influence of her impulsive confidence. After some insistence she yielded. They took the amazed children inside, and she examined and extolled each small article with a delight that equalled theirs.

"We do not all put away childish things with years," she said when they were outside. "I love the wee things yet, and some time"—she smiled defiantly—"some time, when I can and don't feel it a wicked extravagance, I am going to have my childish heart's desire. I am so sure that you will not laugh at me that I will invite you in to my first tea party."

He thanked her gravely, understanding and sympathizing entirely. Did he not carry in his pocket a wonderful carnelian "tau" in memory of the ungratified longing of the boy he used to be? He had been waiting for the Christmas opportunity to gratify her innocent desire, reveling in imagination in the intimacy of her promised hospitality. Now he had put away his day dream with a sigh and extinguished a dim hope that had glimmered feebly. But it remained that he must make the wedding present, and finally, being confident of her perfect sincerity, he ignored obtruding doubts as to appropriateness and procured a fairylike tea set worthy the possession of a princess, which, being unequal to presenting it personally, he left at her door with his card one evening, just escaping her as she came up the stairs.

"Oh!" The glow on her face faded. "How stupid of me! I ought to have known there was a mistake, and I have opened the box." She set it upon the table. He shook his head dismally. "There is no mistake. I beg your pardon. I—"

"But there must be a mistake! They left the package at my door," she said, a little sharply. "I left it myself. I meant it for a wedding present, but I see how"—His voice faltered again.

She regarded his woebegone face intently for a moment. "Very well, I will take it down." Her cheeks were glowing and her eyes sparkling with mischief. "When I found the package I thought you had somehow discovered that today is my birthday and had kindly remembered my childish longing, but if it is a wedding present it must go to Miss Bessie, who is soon to be married."

He sat down heavily and stared at her. "You see, one must be married to receive a wedding present," she explained demurely, her color flaming under his gaze.

The tangle suddenly straightened, he sprang up. "Yes," he assented, still looking into her eyes, where by a flash of inspiration he had seen the kingdom, himself crowned king. He plunged forward across the table and seized her hands, asserting boldly, "It is a wedding present—your wedding present, Alma, dear, for you are going to be married immediately."

For answer she murmured tearfully and happily, "Oh, Morris, we will have tea in the darling little cups our first evening at home!"

A Weak Heart.

"They tell me Bad Bill's dead," said Alkali Ike. "Is that right?" "Sure," replied Cactus Cal; "shot plumb through the heart."

"Well, I ain't surprised then. His heart always was weak."—Philadelphia Press.

The Farmer's Wife.

Is very careful about her churn. She scalds it thoroughly after using, and gives it a sun bath to sweeten it. She knows that if her churn is sour it will taint the butter that is made in it. The stomach is a churn. In the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts are performed processes which are almost exactly like the churning of butter. Is it not apparent then that if this stomach-churn is foul it makes foul all which is put into it?

The evil of a foul stomach is not alone the bad taste in the mouth and the foul breath caused by it, but the corruption of the pure current of blood and the dissemination of disease throughout the body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the sour and foul stomach sweet. It does for the stomach what the washing and sun bath do for the churn—absolutely removes every tainting or corrupting element. In this way it cures blotches, pimples, eruptions, scrofulous swellings, sores, or open eating ulcers and all humors or diseases arising from bad blood.

If you have bitter, nasty, foul taste in your mouth, coated tongue, foul breath, are weak and easily tired, feel depressed and dizzy, have frequent headaches, despondent attacks, gnawing or distress in stomach, constipated or irregular bowels, sour or bitter risings after eating and poor appetite, these symptoms, or any considerable number of them, indicate that you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with the usual accompanying indigestion, or dyspepsia and their attendant derangements.

The best agents known to medical science for the cure of the above symptoms are, under the above conditions, as witnessed by the actions of leading teachers and practitioners of all the several schools of medical practice. They have been analyzed and harmonized, and combined in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That this is absolutely true will be readily proven to your satisfaction if you will mail a postal card request to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for a free copy of his booklet of extracts from the standard medical authorities, giving the names of all the ingredients entering into his world-famous medicine and showing what the most eminent medical men of the age say of them.
