MORE RED TAPE FOR THE POOR FARMER

Law Made More Strict Regarding Slashing Fires

WILL HAVE COUNTY FIRE WARDEN

Must Serve Without Pay From State County to Pay

The old slashing law which required the farmer who wanted to burn his pile of brush to come to the county seat and sue out a permit, has been changed and the addition has not lessened the severity. Instead of passing a law making carelessness a criminal offense, punishable by heavy fine and imprisonment, the farmer must still hunt up a permit before he can burn his brush.

The new law makes state officers and three appointees, by the governor, a fire board, and the fire board will appoint a sheriff, deputy sheriff, or constable, as such fire warden, and the appointee must accept, and get his money for his services, if he can, out of the county. The Washington County farmer will therefore do as before, hunt up some one who will say him "aye" or "nay" that he can burn a little slashing on his own place. The new law will take effect on May 25. A part of the new law follows:

The close season is from June 1 to October 1 of each year, which is the same as that provided by the present law, during which period it shall be lawful for any one to set on fire or cause to be set on fire any slashing, choppies, wood land or brush land, either his own or the property of another, without written permission from a state fire warden and strict compliance with the terms of same, but this restriction does not apply to the burning of low piles, stumps or brush, heaps in small quantities, at a safe distance from other inflammable material and under adequate precautions and personal control, and in accordance with regulations to be adopted by the board; but if any such burning without permission shall result in the escape of fire and injury to the property of another, this shall be held as prima facie evidence that such burning was not safe and was a violation of this section. Violations of these provisions are punishable by fines of not less than $25 nor more than $50, or imprisonment of not less than 10 days nor more than three months.

Any fire warden shall have the right to refuse, revoke or postpone permits when it is clearly necessary for public safety. Any applicant who dissatisfied with the decision of a State Fire Warden shall have the right to appeal to the State Board of Forestry. Any permit obtained through willful misrepresentation shall be invalid and give no exemption from liability of any kind.

Any person who sets on fire or causes to be set on fire any woods, brush, grass, stubble or other material being or growing on any lands not his own, without permission from the owner, or who willfully or negligently allows fire to escape from his own land, or anyone who accidentally sets any fire on his own land or another's and allows it to escape from his control without extinguishing it, or using every effort to do so, is subject to punishment by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $100, or imprisonment for not less than one month nor more than one year.

It is lawful, however, to build campfires, in a careful manner on any uninclosed lands, the owner of which has not forbidden the building of same by personal or posted notice, if, before departing the builder of the fire extinguishes the same; neither do these provisions apply to the setting of back fires, in good faith, to prevent the progress of a fire then burning.

John Booker Jr., of this city, and who came from the Greenville section, where the boys furnished the champion ball players in the olden times, has made a league with Wm Schulmerich, of Farmington, to have a ball game between the Farmington and Hillsboro married men. The battle field promises to furnish both glory and blood, and all the physicians of the city will go down in a body to care for the wounded, and the horses will go down to cart off the dead. The date of the bloodshed has not yet been fixed, and the boys are scurrying around for wool mattresses to use as mits for the occasion.

They report David Kuder, aged 85, and one of the pioneer sawmill men of the Greenville section, as strong mentally as ever, but that he is failing physically.
