Argus and Journal, $1.75.

Marriage license has been granted Marion M. Maury, of Montana, and Miss Alice I. Reynolds, of Forest Grove.

Elsewhere Judge Goodin advises for men to work in a rock quarry and for teams to haul rock and work on the road. Never before in the history of the county has labor been so scarce.

Ira E. Wheeler, formerly of this place and Reedville, was here today. He is now located at North Bend, Oregon, and says he frequently sees M. E. Everitt, now there in the drug business, and Sherman Ritchey, who is doing carpenter work there.

Hannah F. Campbell has sued Jos. Campbell, of Gales Creek, for divorce, alleging that they were wedded in 1882, in Illinois. She says they took up a homestead in 1886, and that the property is worth $2,000. She wants half of the savings and custody of five minor children.

An entertainment will be given at the Congregational church, on Friday evening, May 17, at 8 o'clock. Circumstances will prevent "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" being with us at this time, but she is expected later. A program, consisting of vocal music, shadow pantomime, violin solo, Topsy Turvy drill and action song, Daisy drill, and hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," illustrated with 22 poses. There will be a sale of embroidered and fancy hand bags immediately after the program.

The Redmond & Connell sale in this city, Tuesday, was one of the largest ever held here. The horses, as a rule, went "out of sight" and there was ready sale for all that were offered. "George," a roan, in the lively business for 12 years, went for $120, and other teams, which have stood long service, went correspondingly high.

CHILDREN WHO WENT WRONG

Story of Hiram Winters, Who Arrested His Mother For an Assassination and Colored His Father on Suspicion of Being a Highway Robber.

[Copyright, 1907, by M. M. Cunningham.] James Schermerhorn at twelve years old was a bad boy. He wore his cap on the back of his head, he whistled "Yankee Doodle" on Sundays, he threw axes and crowbars at stray dogs, and if his mother sent him to the grocery to get a quart of molasses in a jug he would swing the jug around his head until the handle broke off.

proud of the fact a trap laid for him. It was in the case of James Schermerhorn. One day after he had taken two steps out of the cellar stairs, so that his uncle Thomas would have a fall when he went to carry a bag of potatoes down cellar, he ran out into the street and hatched on to the back end of the wagon. The driver was a determined man with a wooden leg. He had fought in the Spanish war and was afraid of no boy.

"Young man, I allow no hitching on," he said as he turned and saw James climbing over the tailboard of the wagon.

James Was at Error. "I am the bad boy who choked a bear to death with my naked hands," replied James as he put on a bloody and sinister look.

"It's nothing to me how bad you are. Unhitch your hitch and get off my wagon or you will reap sorrow."

Then the man who had fought in the Spanish war and killed thousands of Spaniards and buried them in unmarked graves saw that he was defied and that his reputation as a brave man was at stake. He stopped his horses and as to make a jump for James, and just at that moment the sawmill took fire, and an alarm was sent in, and a fire engine came galloping out. The defiant boy saw that he had gone too far, and all at once he let go his hitch and dropped into the street. The Spanish veteran cried out to him, but he only ran out his tongue and made up a face in reply. He did not know that the engine was close upon him until he was under the heavy wheels.

James Schermerhorn was carried home and laid on the bed. Several doctors poked away at him and said that he would never crawl under the canvas on circus day again. He was unconscious for several hours, but just before he died he opened his eyes, smiled at his weeping mother and whispered:

"I wish I had been a good boy and died of the yellow fever instead of this."

It is hard work to be a good boy. There is no fun in it. You can't break orchards or melon patches or break windows or peg the mayor with snow-balls, but you will live on and be respected, and some day your fellow men, tired of seeing you around so much, will elect you to the legislature and make your family proud of you.

Henry Harper was another case of how a boy can go wrong. Up to the age of eight he was praised on all sides for his goodness. Then a boy called Terrible Tom lent him an Indian story written by Bunt Neddie. It told how a lad nine years old ran away from home and went west to fight Indians. He killed over 200 and burned their villages and obliged their women to weave red blankets for him, and then he came home to be a bad boy. If his mother wept over his refusal to go to the grocery for a can of kerosene, he drew his scalping knife and threatened to take her scalp. If his father took him by the collar to lead him out into the wood shed, he drew his tomahawk and uttered a war-whoop and was let alone.

One day when the village constable started to arrest Henry as a desperado the youth hid himself in a cider mill and threatened to burn every widow and orphan in the town at the stake if he was not let alone. They cowed, and they threatened, but nothing would move the boy. At last, when his mother had become so perturbed that she could no longer keep up the monthly payments on her sewing machine and when his father was looking out for a good place to jump into the mill pond and drown himself, there came a fatal day in this bad boy's history. No bad boy ever escapes that fatal day. It is as sure to come as that a city alderman gets rich on holding two terms of office.

Henry Met a Sad Fate.

A tin peddler drove into the village to sell his wares, and Henry Harper determined to add his scalp to his large and interesting collection. The peddler objected to being made a bald-headed man. Some folks were inclined afterward to blame him, saying that the less hair he had the less money he would have to pay out for hair dye, but in defending his scalp he pushed Henry down an old well, and the boy was drowned before they could lower a rope to him. It is hoped that he pointed off his badness before he died, but you never can tell. It was an awful fate to overtake a young boy, but what can you expect? A boy can kill off about so many Indians and terrorists about so many white folk, and then an old well or something else comes along, and he is a goner. This does not apply to red-headed boys in particular, but to all sorts of boys.

As a baby Hiram Winters was loved by all. He would just lie around on the floor or under the bed or in any other old place and coo and smile and laugh and try to tickle his own fat feet. He was never known to keep his parents awake at nights, and if his mother gave him the butcher knife or a box of matches to play with while she went visiting he never attempted to cut his mother's throat or set the house on fire. Thousands of people said that he would live to be president of the United States and an honor to his parents, and it did look that way for a time; but, alas, he had hardly learned the alphabet when he got hold of an Old Sledge book and started on his downward career. He determined to be a great detective and a desperate man, and his young and brief career was full of adventure and excitement. He was only seven years old when he arrested his mother for an assassination. Then he collared his father on suspicion of being a highway robber. For two years he was on the trail of everybody. He was talked to and argued with and licked in vain. They put him in jail, and he dug out. Other slouts hunted him, and he escaped. He called himself the Midnight Shadow of Shadowville, and he boasted that no criminal could escape him.

That Bad Boy Hiram.

one hand and a revolver in the other, while he had a pair of handcuffs in his blind pocket, when a wire fence man came driving into the town on a gallop and ran the boy down. He was not killed outright, but lingered along for two weeks. During this time he sent for other boys and talked to them, with tears in his eyes. He told them that goodness was a good thing to live by, and that they couldn't make a cent out of badness, and that if he had his life to live over again he would go to Africa and make the heathen stand on their heads with goodness or know the reason why. Then he died, and they planted caino and hollyhocks on his grave, but to this day they speak of him as "that bad boy Hiram," and they point to his case to warn other boys against following in his footsteps.

A Lazy Liver

May be only a tired liver, or a starved liver. It would be a stupid as well as a savage thing to beat a weary or starved man because he lagged in his work. So in treating the legging, torpid liver it is a great mistake to lash it with strong drastic drugs. A torpid liver is but an indication of an ill-nourished, enfeebled body whose organs are weary with over work. Start with the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in working order and see how quickly your liver will become active.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has made many marvelous cures of "liver trouble" by its wonderful control of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores the normal activity of the stomach, increases the secretions of the blood-making glands, cleanses the system from poisonous accumulations, and so relieves the liver of the burdens imposed upon it by the defection of other organs.

If you have bitter or bad taste in the morning, poor or feeble appetite, coated tongue, foul breath, constipated or irregular bowels, feel weak, easily tired, dependent, frequent headaches, pain or distress, "small of back," swelling or distension in stomach, perhaps nausea, or "brimstone" fumes in throat after eating, and other symptoms of weak stomach and torpid liver, you will find relief in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Perhaps only a part of the above symptoms will be present at one time and yet point to torpid liver or biliousness and weak stomach. Avoid all hot bread and greasy, griddle cakes and other indigestible food and take the "Golden Medical Discovery" regularly and stick to it as long as you are vigorous and strong.

The "Discovery" is non-secret, non-alcoholic, is a glyceric extract of native medicinal roots with a full list of its ingredients printed on each bottle-wrapper and enclosed under glass. Its ingredients are analyzed and extolled by the most eminent medical writers of the age and are recommended to cure the diseases for which it is advised.

Don't accept a substitute of unknown composition for this non-secret medicine of known composition.

A FATAL MISTAKE

Is Often Made by the Wisest of Hillsboro People

It's a fatal mistake to neglect backache. Backache is the first symptom of kidney trouble. Serious complications follow. Doan's Kidney Pills cure them promptly. Don't delay until too late. Until it becomes diabetes—Bright's disease.

William Hunsinger, retired, of 421 Water St., Salem, Ore., says: "I speak from personal experience when I say that Doan's Kidney Pills do all that is claimed for them in curing kidney complaint and backache. I had felt the need of such a remedy for a good long while, but did not know just what I should use. I have found that many medicines are worthless, and that even physicians' prescriptions do not always prove effective. When I read of Doan's Kidney Pills, however, I was induced to go to a drug store and procure a supply. The backache and irregular condition of the kidneys which had annoyed me, quickly gave way upon beginning to use your remedy. I was restored to a condition of ease and comfort. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone in need of such a medicine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McLure Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.
