Fairbanks, Garfield, Wilson, Harriman—and now comes Taft, last, but not least, corporally or mentally.

Secretary of War, Wm. H. Taft, arrived in Portland today, and will speak in the Armory at that place tomorrow night.

Washington County, often referred to by non-residents, as "the best county in the state," is busy gathering her bumper crops of grain, hops and fruit...

The Journal states that there has been a "deal between Roosevelt and Fulton," whereby Mr. Bristol's official scalp is to dangle at the latter's belt when Congress meets.

Schwab, the steel magnate, says, "Wall street does not represent the country." Of course not. The West has heard something about a financial depression on Wall Street...

Bring your big yellow pumpkins, your unrivaled squashes, your red-cheek apples, your fine horeas and cattle, pretty babies, fat babies, pioneer relics, grain, fruit, hop and vegetable specimens to the Hillsboro Street Fair.

Judge John B. Waldo, once a Supreme Judge of Oregon, died Monday last, at his home in the Waldo Hills, near Salem.

Mr. Harriman made a loop trip through Oregon the past week. While he may have been looking for railway routes, no promises were given on the trip that any railroad extensions would be made...

GALLOWAY REVERSED

In all three referendum cases of Robert I. Stevens vs. F. W. Benson, John F. Logan vs. Secretary of State F. W. Benson and Eugene Palmer and Cyrus H. Walker vs. Secretary of State F. W. Benson, the decisions of the court of Marion county were reversed Sept. 3, by the supreme court...

These three cases were the result of referendum petitions presented against the anti-pass bill, the bill for the regulation of sheriff's fees in bonding of convicts and the state university appropriation bill.

THE PERKINS FAMILY

Why They Are Not Going to the Seashore This Summer.

REASONS GALORE IN DIARY.

Hubby Refers to It When Wifey Demands an Explanation—Calls Him Meanest Man in Europe, Asia, Africa or America.

Money, and when she thought he had put his foot in the trap she suddenly said: "Mr. Perkins, I will need about a hundred dollars next week if I am to get ready for the seashore."

had a touch of cold after getting to bed. You are not going to have the check to tell me you have forgotten it?"

His Inevitable Dairy. Mr. Perkins slowly and calmly carried his hand to his breast pocket and drew forth the inevitable diary and consulted it with puckered brow, carefully watched by Mrs. Perkins.

"Yes, I find something about it here," he said when he had found the right page. "Under date of Dec. 19 I find the following entry:

"Raining, snowing and blowing. Durn such a climate! I'd like to get out of it for good. I have a sore throat, and Mrs. P. has a cough that may result in consumption. I have just promised her that we will go to the seashore next summer. C. T. A."

"There, didn't I tell you?" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins. "You did, my love—you did. Yes, on the night of the 19th of last December I promised you that we would go to the seashore this summer, but you observe the letters 'C. T. A.' after the promise. They stand for 'consult the authorities'; and I have done so. In fact, I have been consulting the authorities for the last three months."

"Is this some scheme to wriggle out of your promise? Do you intend to dodge and twist and bring up what you call your philosophy? If you do, then let me tell you that I won't stand it for a minute—not a minute. When you make a promise and write it down, that ought to be enough for a man of honor."

"Mrs. Perkins," he calmly continued, "when I met you I had been a widower for three long years. I had made my own bed, cooked my own meals and patched my own trousers. I hardly dared hope when I met you that you would fall in love with me and make me happy again, but you did. I appreciate the deed. I shall always appreciate it. If I should lose you, life would no longer be worth the living. There isn't one chance in a thousand that I could marry No. 2."

"That's it—bring it that. I'm your second wife. Don't never miss a chance to do that. But what has that got to do with our going to the seashore?"

Consulted Authorities. "Everything, my dear. That's why I put 'C. T. A.' after the memoranda. I have consulted the authorities in regard to you. You weigh 180 pounds, and you get away with a square meal out of what that noble and tender heart of yours—what of your heart? You are an inland bird, and you have been flying from tree to tree and hopping from twig to twig, far from the ocean's roar. How would it be if you were suddenly rushed down to Atlantic City and to a salt atmosphere? Would it benefit or harm you? Could that loving heart of yours stand the strain? This was one of the things I had to consult the authorities about, and it was well that I did. I have also been sifting newspaper clippings since the first of the year."

"That is, you have been trying to find some excuse to break your promise. Go ahead. I can see that you are going to twist out of it."

"My dear Mrs. Perkins, let me read you a record, and if you then desire to jeopardize your life I shall have nothing to say."

"Dr. Barnes says that a sudden change of climate from fresh to salt is almost sure to produce death from heart ailment."

"Dr. Smith says that he has known of 100 cases where fat women going to Atlantic City have died within twenty-four hours of heart trouble."

"Dr. Hines says that salt air striking an inland person all of a sudden is as bad as a bullet."

"Dr. Hillsford kept track of cases along the Atlantic coast last season and has a record of 440 fat women who died in their beds on the very first night after their arrival. They were not stricken dead by the high charges of the hotels, but their hearts went back on them."

"There is the record, Mrs. Perkins, and what am I to do? Am I to rush you down to the seashore and have you dead on my hands, or am I to keep you inland and have your company and your love for many years to come?"

"Those doctors are fools, and you know it!" snapped Mrs. Perkins in reply.

"And there are other things," continued Mrs. Perkins without taking note of her exclamation. "As I said a few minutes ago, you weigh 180 pounds. You can no longer sit on my lap without my knees giving way. You are still a sly, but what effect is the salty atmosphere going to have on you? Will it relegate you back to a skeleton, or will you increase to 250 pounds and make it impossible for me to squeeze you through the door of an ordinary room? That's a thing to be thought of."

Would Change Her Disposition. "Again, changing climates changes dispositions. We are like cooling doves here. We may get down to the seashore to fairly hate each other. Seven different doctors say this may be the case. I do not wish to be guilty of your murder, my love, and I do not want to wake up and find that you have cut my windpipe."

"Another thing. You hair is thin and faded. You are obliged to dye it. The facts are not against you in the slightest, as Marie Antonette had to do the same thing. But here is the kernel. Thirty different doctors certify that in such cases the woman who goes to the seashore comes home with straw colored hair and terrible headaches and while suffering from the latter are often driven to suicide. Suppose I were to come home from the office some day and find you hanging from our only peach tree? Could I ever eat peaches from it again? These are things for you to think of, my dear Mrs. Perkins, to sit up and think of in the most serious manner. When you have thought of them we will reopen the subject and see what conclusions we can arrive at."

A FATAL MISTAKE

Is Often Made by the Wisest of Hillsboro People

It's a fatal mistake to neglect backache. Backache is the first symptom of kidney troubles which lead to serious complications follow. Don't delay until too late. Until it becomes diabetes—Bright's disease.

William Bangardner, retired, of 437 Water St., Salem, Ore., says: "I speak from personal experience when I say that Don's Kidney Pills do all that is claimed for them in curing kidney complaint and backache. I had felt the need of such a remedy for a good long while, but did not know just what I should use. I have found that many medicines are worthless, and that even physicians' prescriptions do not always prove satisfactory. When I read of Don's Kidney Pills, however, I was induced to go to a drug store and procure a supply. The backache and irregular condition of the kidneys which had annoyed me, quickly gave way upon beginning to use your remedy. I was restored to a condition of ease and comfort. I can recommend Don's Kidney Pills to anyone in need of such a medicine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, Don's, and take no other.
