

HEAD BLOWN OFF BY A BLAST OF POWDER

Martin Killed near Beaverton, Monday

NEW BLAST COSTS LABORER LIFE

Severed From Body in View of His Companions

Martin, a laborer employed by the Coast Construction Company, which is building the Beaverton and Hillsboro cut-off between Beaverton and the Willamette, met a horrible death, Tuesday afternoon, while blasting stumps on the right bank, about a half mile from the Beaverton terminus. Martin, who had charge of the blasting, had put two charges under a stump, and one of them had exploded. The stump, which hung fire, and Martin, who was leaning against it, was blown over the stump, when, while waiting to lure the man to his feet, the charge exploded, blowing the unfortunate man's head almost clean off his body. His companions were horrified by the awful death, and it appears that he had recently earned Martin to be more careful, but he continued his carelessness.

Martin stood on a large root of the blasted stump, and the explosion threw him at least 40 feet into the air, the body landing 150 feet away. Coroner E. C. Brown went to the scene, but decided an inquest was unnecessary, as it was clear from the facts that the fatality attached to the man was due to his carelessness.

When the man started to work he had a fellow workman that his name was J. Martin, that he was 35 years of age, and that he was a native of London, England. There were no papers to identify Martin, so to locate relatives.
