SUB-SOILING IS A GREAT NECESSITY

In Connection With Summer Irrigation

GOVERNMENT EXPERT MAKES VISIT

A. P. Stover Says Irrigation Will be General in the Valley

A. P. Stover, in charge of the Summer irrigation experiments in the Willamette Valley, under the supervision of the Department of Agricultural, was in town Monday, and made the Argus a pleasant call.

Mr. Stover spent Sunday at Cove Oaks Farm, north of this city, where the experiments in this county are being conducted. He expressed himself as being well pleased with the work done out there this summer, and remarked that better demonstrations of the value of summer irrigation would be made next year, in this county.

He said that sub-soiling, in connection with a summer irrigation in this valley, is an absolute necessity. The ground must be broken up underneath, much deeper than an ordinary plow will do it, in order to make irrigation the success, contemplated by the government in its experiments. He predicted that summer irrigation would become quite general in this valley, in time to come, and spoke of the value of reservoirs as a means of conserving the water in the mountain streams for use in irrigation.

"Good crops can be grown in the Willamette valley without summer irrigation," said Mr. Stover, "but when you can get from two to three crops by irrigation to one without it, as we can prove by our experiments, it sets the farmer and dairyman to thinking, and that is the object of our work. The business of the government is to show what can be done with irrigation. It is then up to the intelligent farmer to act upon the information he has received."

Mr. Stover went to Portland, Monday afternoon. He has several other stations in the Willamette valley, where similar experiments to those in this county are being made.

WILL HURT OREGON DAIRYMEN

Rulings have recently been made by the Federal Pure Food authorities affecting the standard of condensed milk, the standard having been apparently based upon the chemical composition of milk produced in the East; the standard which is based at 77 butterfat has been changed to 28 per cent solids. This recommendation made by eastern members of the Pure Food Commission will require the condenser to either adulterate this product, or if the entire 28 per cent solids are used, will make an unmarketable condensed milk.

The Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Co., in order to overcome the rulings of the Pure Food authorities, has begun an extended investigation of the milk production in this county. Circular letters have been sent to divers dairymen calling their attention to the necessity of coping with what seems to be an unfair ruling, and have asked those who would, to make affidavit to the condition of this milk on September 1st. A great many dairymen have responded and the testings thus taken will go a long way towards convincing the pure food authorities that the ruling is unjust to the Western dairyman.

SEWERAGE PROBLEM SOLVED BY SEPTIC TANK

Scientifically Constructed, the Appliance Cares for all Household Waste, Preventing Danger to Health or Offensive Odor

The above diagram illustrates the most approved type of Septic Tank. A problem that has long confronted those desiring to install modern plumbing in localities without an adequate sewerage system has now been best to dispose of household waste without danger to health. Science has come to the rescue and, by employing the destructive agents provided by nature herself, has solved the problem. It has long been known that under favorable conditions certain bacteria will destroy the offensive elements contained in household waste, leaving a residue chemically pure, which may be easily disposed of. Experience has proven the above type of tank best suited to enable them to properly perform their work. Many tanks of other types have proven failures because their construction was such as to permit the entrance of air and light. When built of cement, unless the material is of the best, surface water will seep into the tank, and this with the constant rush of water from the house will prevent the bacteria from performing their work. In the tank shown above the three-chamber device prevents this disturbance, and being constructed of the best quality of tile, leakage is impossible.

Parties contemplating building or wishing to install modern plumbing in residences already erected are invited to investigate. Estimates cheerfully furnished.
