Humor and Philosophy

By BUNCAN N. SMITH

DON'T WORRY, FOR-

You will put yourself at the mercy of all the cheap philosophers and venders of fresh fads in the universe if you do.

You will get furrows in your marble brow and hollows in your dimpled cheeks and a sickly pallor over your speaking countenance-that is, if you are a woman. If you are a man it will affect your wife most, in which case she may get an affinity.

If you are a woman the beauty expert, in case you persist in worrying. will get all your matines money, all your silk stocking money, all your millinery money, all your empire gown money, and after that what's the use in living?

Your relations-in-law will look you over with cruel arrogance and decide that you must have an evil conscience. a weak will, a dark past and a somber future and wonder what hypnotic power you used to break into the family anyhow.

Moreover, some people will say that you are idle and slipshod if you indulge in the worry habit. They will insist that anybody that has real work to do and real difficulties to meet can have no time for idle worry. Of course they will misjudge you, but you know how people are.

There isn't any money in it.

Some women get squint eyed and lantern jawed by poring so closely over the beauty hints in the culture columns.

> Some Drawbacks. She is young; she is fair; She is good to see, And her nut brown hair Has entangled me.
> And her round throat white

In her cheeks' soft bloom
Is the dew drenched rose
Like a rich perfume.
Now it comes and gues.
But, alas, when she speaks
She her English slays
And the red gore reeks
In each dripping phrase.
