Taking Something For It.

The New Spring Hat.
"What is that I see before me?"
Asked the poor bewitched man.
"It's a flowerpot inverted.
Or let a new daisy.
A fancy market basket.
Or a brand new chimney pot."
When his wife emphatically answered,
"Indeed, sir, it is not!"

"What is it, then?" he queried.
"And why is it so gay?"
Why do you see such fine rigging?
Oh, what is it, dear? I pray?
I suppose it has some meaning.
I suppose some use it bears.
Is it some barbaric ware, dear?
Then, why isn't it in pairs?"
But she answered, oh, so slyly:
"Pray, what are you driving at?
Can't you see the thing of beauty
Is my stylish new spring hat?"
"And must I go with that horror?"
"Yes," she said, "for it is bought."
But she shrieked as he fell prostrate.
He had fainted at the thought.

Fruit and vegetables will be high this year. It takes so much of such stuff to go on the wash tub, summer hats, now in vogue in the cities.

Hillsboro needs a larger dinner pail brigade, and better payroll for location will bring all these things in time, but it is always in order to boost for new enterprises. Nothing is got without effort. This town ought to have 10,000 people within the next 5 years. The way to get people and new enterprises is to make the place attractive to new comers, and to give them the "glad hand." Better light service, plenty of good water, more cement sidewalks, and a pull altogether, without factional wrangling, are some of Hillsboro's needs.

THE DRAGON SCENT'S SPRING

The meadow lot is looking green. That's been so brown and sore. An' trees are bud' out their leaves. A sign that Spring is here.

The women's hats, like turtles' shells All look so gay and queer. But that is just a sort of humor. A hint that Spring is here.

The dandelion—durn the pest—He's such a very year. An' pop his yellow head in sight. 'Bout time that Spring is here.

The old hen that has laid so long An' well, her breakfast cheer. Now wants to set, an' fight, by gosh—so Spring is surely here.

The cat's bawling in the yard. The new cat nips my hand. Another sign—I reckon, too—That Spring is in the land.

The dogwood blooms'll soon shine out An' wave their milk-white rims. All faded down so 'farnal thick You'd think they'd break the limits.

All these are signs of Spring, I say. An' signs that never cheat. But here's a sign that clinches things—The "hoos ads" in our sheet.

An' yet, another sign shows up—'I'm feelin' mighty queer. An' want to tumble in the woods—Sure sign that Spring is here!

Linus Brown and Miss Mahol McLeary, of Portland, visited relatives last Sunday.

Work of Vandalism which Should be Stopped

Vandalism seems to be on the increase, and there is one specific instance that should receive official attention. The beautiful and imposing monument over the tomb of the late Congressman Thos. H. Tongue for some time has been the target for rifle and revolver practice at the hands of those who have little sense of the proprieties.

Bullet marks are to be seen at various places on the shaft, which is located a mile west of the city. This is a good halftone of the shaft.

John Doe—one of the Doe family—was arrested last night for being too late to the streets, and was taken to the Marshal Mr. Doe, 50, which he paid.
