E. Goff, who has chopped out a neat little home south of the river, was in town Saturday.

Miss Estrella Ford, daughter of Ex-sheriff H. P. Ford, of Portland, was the guest of Mrs. J. W. Connell, Sunday.

William Ott, a fanatic of Dayton, Yamhill County, was picked up at Tigardville, Saturday, and brought here on a charge of insanity. Ott's wife was located and telephoned, and she asked County Judge Goodin to send the man home on the evening train, which was done. Ott imagines that his mission is to save the souls of all, and he takes aberrational spells and starts out. When captured he was dressed in overalls and blouse, and carried a bible. While in the jail he and Rosclair, wife-murderer, had a spirited controversy, and the evangelist from Yamhill had a hard time to hold his own with the descendant of Cain.

Careless shooting inside the limits of the city will yet get someone into serious trouble. Late Thursday afternoon, while Wes Boscow was in the clothing department of the Wehrung Store, a bullet from a .22 calibre gun crashed through the window, within ten feet from the salesman. The bullet cut a hole over an inch in diameter and then landed in the show window, where it was later found by F. J. Sewell, of the Commercial Bank. The ball came from over the roof of the Hotel Tuatlati, and must have been shot from North Hillsboro.

State Game Warden R. O. Stevenson was down from Forest Grove, Friday, and tried to trade off a hunting license for a year's subscription to the Argus. The Argus refused to trade as it understands that Geo. Armentrout will take the field again this year, and there is no sense in blowing in money for nothing. Armentrout—at over 70 years—is the champion of them all, and can crack a buck's eye at a longer distance than the younger fellows.

D. Harvey, who has lived above Mountindale for a good many years, lost his house by fire Sunday afternoon. The blaze caught from a defective flue, and although help came there was no saving the house or its contents. O. G. Wilkes, of the Independent Telephone, happened to be close by and went up to the place to assist. The house was worth over $1,000. The Harveys are elderly people, and highly esteemed.

Harry Hall, of Shady Brook, and one of the oldtimers of the north county, was in Friday. H. H. says there is considerable complaint all over his section about cattle running at large. This murmur is heard, however, from all precincts except the towns.

Jas. May, the old veteran of Vineland, was in Friday, and says that a few in his neighborhood are trying to get a change in the mail route. Three miles is a long way to go for a daily mail.

W. E. Boucsein, homesteader and carpenter, and who is well known between here and his Mountindale ranch, was a county seat caller, Monday.

John Purves and wife, who formerly lived near Hudson, Wis., the home of the humorist, the late "Bill Nye," were over from their South Tuatlati home, Monday.

Noxicide disinfects and kills the germs Mixes with water. Is cheap and effective. Use it now and prevent disease. Pint, 35c; quart, 60c. R. C. Harttramp. 11-4

Mrs. Minnie Tucker, who has been visiting her uncle, Palmer Tucker, above Mountindale, came in Monday, and departed to attend the Seattle Fair and the Rose Festival.

Jesse J. Mays, interested in the Mays Company, at Glencoe, was in the city Monday morning, driving in the supply team, relieving Al. Hurst, who was kicked by a horse one day last week.

John Zimmerman, of Wallace Settlement, was down to the city Friday, and reports his wife convalescing from a very severe illness. While in town he was the guest of his sister, Mrs. Lena Roundy.

W. E. McCourt returned Friday from the bedside of his brother-in-law, W. F. Nelson, of Seattle, who was prostrated last week, and was unconscious from a stroke of paralysis, and who has since died.

Perry Ellis, a former Hillsboro photographer, and who knows the art family throughout, was in town from Hillsdale, Saturday, accompanied by Mrs. Ellis. He is handling real estate and farming.

Dan Stoller, who ranches many years up in Helvetia, and who sold a few months ago, was out from Portland, Friday. Even though he is getting along in years the call of the farm is working on him.

R. N. Varley, formerly a feed man at the Grove, now ranching over in the Jobe's section, was over Friday, nursing a touch of rheumatism.

J. C. Schulmerich, of Banks, was down Friday, and sold a fine horse, out of Lovelace, to County Commissioner Butler, the price being $300.

W. C. Darsty, one of Glencoe's baseball enthusiasts, was in town Saturday and says "Come out and see the best country team in the county."

A. Anderson and wife, of Helvetia, were over to the county seat Friday.

Jos. Miller, who is clearing up a farm above Glencoe, on the hill, was in town Friday.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It would not matter so much if my lady should mistake the waste paper basket for her new hat, except for the litter when she inverted it. It is easy to give advice, but just suppose for a minute that you had to take it yourself. Gracious!

Some people are naturally truthful, and others acquire that trouble breeding condition only by persistent effort. Perhaps there is some one who understands the tariff, but if so he is wisely keeping still.

The man who takes things as they come and never lets go is the man that is heard from later. The results of money saving may be comfortable, but the operation isn't nearly as exciting as that of money spending.

People talk a lot about liking to take chances, but they never are willing to let a sure thing get by in order to take a chance. All optimistic things may not be paying, but did you ever notice that all paying things are looking toward optimism?

If the rage for tipping continues, at the end the undertaker may expect us to arise and hand him a good sized one. Admitting that there is good in each of us, should it stay there or come out?

Shining Example. When Turkey casts aside the bonds That held her to the past And comes, a giant new and strong, By elders not outclassed, And from a nation old and sick Bits up and sets the pace, Then confidently we may say There's hope for any race.

Who would have thought it of the Turk, So often billed to die, That he would come to life again, So gay and young and spry? Who would have prophesied that he The despot's power would check And be discovered standing there Upon the sultan's neck?

Of course he stood it pretty long, And time he had to learn, From centuries of greed and graft At last the worm will turn, And when at last he turned and took The nations by surprise, He only had to reach his hand To grasp the freeman's prize.

Good boy there, Mr. Youthful Turk! You've surely won a place Among advancing peoples who Toward progress set their face, You've joined the human brotherhood, Our hand is at your door To welcome you and say you are Unspeaking no more.

Her Preference.

"Will you be my wife, my dear?" said the aged millionaire to the pert young thing. "Well, there is only one thing that I would rather be," she admitted reflectively. "And what is that?" "Your widow."

What is? "Ma!" "Yes, my son." "You say there is a place for everything?" "Certainly." "Well, what is the proper place for improper things?"

More Attractive. "What are you going to be, Edgar, when you grow up?" "President." "Sure of that?" "Yes, since they raised the pay I think I will take it."

Needed Help. "That's a bright boy." "Yes, he is a bright boy." "I know it. I saw him come in out of the rain." "Sure a policeman wasn't after him?"

Easy Enough. "He overheard them making love." "What did they say?" "Nothing." "A deaf man could have overheard that."

Loves Us Not. Into the deep, remorseless sea He'd like to have a chance to shove us. Between the post and you and me, I feel that Castro does not love us.
