Let them tinker the tariff all they want; let the trusts get their work in, and let the little two-by-four running country newspaper look wise and ululate about saving the country—but old reliable Washington County is in the front ranks with a bountiful year, even if a little hay is discolored. The stock will eat it—and if they refuse, we will feed it to the long-eared gentry who try to make intelligent readers believe they must take their politics from narrow-headed country newspaper men, or lose their crops and citizenship.

A soaking rain has saved Washington county. A big vegetable crop is assured; pasture will be fine during July and August; potatoes will yield as always, and late sown grain is getting busy. Old Jupiter Pluvius made his visit at the right time, and saved the day.
