SUPPOSE IT WERE YOU

(Portland Oregonian) If you had hunted for the Pole For many, many years, And walked through Arctic snow and ice And froze your nose and ears— And then some fellow came along And beat you to the place— Don't you think, my dear old pal, That it would freeze your face,

And mar you—
And jar you—
And make you "leary",
Just like Peary?

And if you thought you had a cinch
To name and fame, Old Hoss,
And built your igloos here and there,
Nor cared for cold a toss—
And then some chap would sledge right by
Nor even backward look,
Don't you think that you would grouch
And say, "Con'ound that Cook!"
And swear some,
A foursome.

A foursome, A salamander— Like the Commander? If you were to the manor born.

And knew you were no dub-Wore the colors on your breast Of the Peary Arctic Club-And then a chappy drove his dogs Where south you always look— Don't you think, kind reader, that You'd say, "_____ -- that Cook!" And lie some-

Swear on your soul
"Cook found no Pote"?

—The Deacon, Hillsboro, Ore.
