The Hillsboro Band has demonstrated that it can take care of itself along musical lines.

Hillsboro is moving right along, thank you! A pull for a canery; a pull for a big sawmill or two to add to the one already here, and a pull altogether will put Hillsboro in the 5,000 class in a year or so.

Teddy is coming home. Glad to see him.

ASSESSOR'S NOTES.

Assessor Max Crandall has received instructions from the State Tax Commission, and the directions clear up much that has been the bone of contention.

Many people hold that a colt is not taxable until it is a year old. This is error. A colt or calf is taxable just as soon as it has any cash value, and must be so assessed.

Mortgages must be assessed at face value.

Personal property tax follows the person against whom the assessment is made. The commission says: "Therefore any person to whom personal property is assessed, if it can be legally assessed to such person, is liable for the payment of the tax thereon."

The assessor has no authority to allow any household's exemption.

The assessor has the right to consider the value of a franchise in assessing corporation property.

A person living in another state and holding a mortgage on real estate in this county does not have to pay a tax on the mortgage. The commission says: "The property to be assessed is the debt which is due to the creditor, and his residence out of the state draws such property to him."

Where a person is assessed on personal property and then becomes bankrupt, the property assessed passing to other parties by reason of such bankruptcy, the county loses the tax.

Laura Hart sues Mike Hart for divorce—a heartless proceeding; and Anna M. Ryan asks for reparation from John B. Ryan—and thus do mortals ask for the sun dering of this made by the master hand.

William Feldt, of above Buxton, was held in $1,000 bonds, the last of the week, to answer a charge of wife-beating, preferred by his wife. He went to jail in default of bail, and the grand jury has been investigating the case.

Miss Alice Denton, stenographer, was a reformer in a very quiet way. In the village she had left behind her there was no show to carry out her ideas, but she had not been in the city a month when she had Jimmie the Kid on her hands.

Jimmie was taken into the boarding house and the blood washed off his face and his hair combed, and then he was questioned. His name was Jimmie Skate—so named because he was an orphan skating around for a living, no home, no relatives, the coppers bounding him from morning until night because he would not steal peanuts and divide with them.

When his story was finished he had the girl in tears. At the end of another half hour, by talking to Jimmie of his dead mother in heaven, Sunday school, the ways of goodness, and so on, she had him in tears. A partnership was formed. She was to be a guardian angel to Jimmie, and he was to mend his ways. Five dollars was handed him to get a suit of clothes, and his profits selling newspapers would rent him a cheap room and buy his daily bread.

At frequent intervals he was to call on Miss Denton and report and receive further advice and encouragement. He was not to swear, fight, smoke or do aught else to militate against the career mapped out for him.

Two evenings later Jimmie called, wearing his new suit. He had had his hair cut also. He quite looked the orphan whose motto was excelsior. Thank you, he didn't need any more money; he was getting along famously. As he said this he winked in an expressive way at Miss Denton. She didn't understand it, and she didn't quite like it, but she didn't want to push a poor orphan to the wall all at once. Two hours were spent in trying to teach the boy the first four letters of the alphabet, and then he took his departure. Later on the girl found the sum of $13.50 on the stand. She knew it was not her money, and she raked her brains in vain to solve the problem. Next morning the landlady solved it in a moment. She said it was on the cost of living, found himself temporarily at a loss. "Brooks," he said, "I want to use that Scriptural phrase, 'From Dan to Beth-lehem'."

"Beelzebub?" suggested Brooks. "Thanks," said Rivers, resuming his writing. "I had it at my tongue's end, but I couldn't quite think of it."—Chicago Tribune.

Why Not? Why doesn't some smart genius who wants to make his stake commence raising "smiled peanuts" on the shores of Great Salt Lake?—Judge.

Then He Quits. "I know a man who has his hammer out on all occasions except one." "What is that one?" "When it is time to put down the carpet."—Baltimore American.

GRAND JURY IN SESSION

Met Here Monday Morning and Considering Cases

TO REPORT THIS AFTERNOON

Will Doubtless Then be Discharged for Term

The grand jury, J. A. Thornburgh, foreman, A. H. Phipps, C. L. Crocker, Geo. Frewing, C. E. Potts and B. B. Reeves, met Monday morning, and have been considering state cases. Chief of these is supposed to have been the Wm. Feldt case, defendant charged with wife beating. They are to report this afternoon. The court was also here and has been hearing cases, today being occupied with divorce matters. Other business transacted during the week:

Dismissed—Oregon Electric vs. Block, Phillips, Devere, Cereghino and Henry; P. R. & N. vs. Hancock; Schief vs. Schief; Burgess vs. Burgess; Geo. Naylor vs. Edgar Hannan et al; Smith vs. Washington County; J. W. Shute vs. F. A. Bailey, Bonner vs. Daws.

E. C. Luce appointed guardian ad litem Wm and Lena Stark, insane, and Ella Henry and Margaret Dunkers, minors, pending "partition and sale suit." Stark vs. Stark, land below Scholls.

Set for Trial—Johnson vs. Pacific Coast Condensed Milk Co.; March 22; Oregon Electric vs. Hawthorne, March 22; Reimers and Mann vs. Gill, March 22; Leo vs. Diety, March 23; Thorne vs. Butler, March 23.

Motion filed to reopen case of Nelson vs. Hart; under advisement. Venen vs. Booth; defendants given ten days to answer.

Thompson vs. Linton; motion filed to make complaint more definite; case set for hearing March 23. Wall vs. Everest, foreclosure, default entered.

Decrees of Divorce—Alice Barber given a decree from Fred Barber, property rights settled out of court; Allie Klinger granted decree from E. Klinger; Hutton vs. Hutton; Markwald vs. Markwald; Morrison vs. Morrison; Sanders vs. Sanders; Noah Hingley was granted a divorce from his wife.

Romona Miller was granted a divorce and given one-third of the real estate, near Farmington. The court, however, denied alimony as requested.

money sent by Providence to one who had been good to an orphan.

Two or three evenings later Jimmie called again. The collar had been ripped off the new coat, and he was about to be charged with fighting with a ferryboat to save a would be suicide and the would be had torn the collar from its fastenings. He was kissed instead of scolded, and he felt so good over it that he went right at it and learned to distinguish the letter "U" from the letter "O." His daily profits allowed him lobster salad once a day, and he was feeling that he had something to live for. He winked the same wink as before. It would have been understood by a man to mean that the girl understood each other, but the girl failed to make it out and was a bit piqued. An hour after Jimmie's departure she found a new silver purse with $4 in it under a chair. Here was a new mystery for the landlady to solve. She was equal to the task. She, however, concluded that Providence had begun rewarding a man who would not be at all surprised to see a horse and buggy driven into the house some evening.

Jimmie never missed two calls per week and sometimes made three. He was eager to make mental progress, and at some stage in the proceedings he always indulged in that expressive wink. One evening he was taken to task for it, but instead of being cast down he winked again and muttered something about "pards." Sooner or later after he left Miss Denton made a find of money or jewelry. One afternoon a messenger left a valuable muff at the house for her. Again it was a new jacket. If she hadn't been a reformer and if the landlady hadn't been a believer in Providence the key of the mystery might have been sooner grasped. As it was it seemed unfathomable.

Two months had passed and Jimmie had come so near the governorship that he had learned the alphabet down to "G" when Providence let go of the case and a detective took it up. The boy called one evening and handed out a diamond bracelet which he said he had received for stopping a runaway trolley car and saving the lives of forty people. He was praised for his gallantry and a promise made to keep the jewel safe for him, and just then the detective entered and took him by the neck. This was practically the end and talked about the ways of Providence she was also invited to go along to the station house.

All the plunder had been preserved. Miss Denton and the landlady had to get a lawyer and do a great deal of weeping besides to get out of it, but Jimmie did no weeping. He just winked. He continued to wink until the two women took the stand against him, and he was sentenced to the reform school, and then he ceased to wink and said in a voice of reproach to Miss Denton:

"I thought youse understood dat I was to do de stealin' and make a fair divvy. What youse tink I was doin' all dat winkin' fur?"
