He paid the fine and was then assessed $500 on three other indictments, and the last assessment was suspended during good conduct.

R. M. Dooley won his case against Avery. This was the famous case wherein Dooley, as a Forest Grove banker, collected a note which had been outlawed some twenty years, and he charged $60 for the work which was a windfall to Avery. The jury evidently thought Avery had all that was coming to him and gave Dooley a verdict.
