A. R. Warren, of this city, says that misfortunes never come singly. He was at Cathlamet, Wash., last week, falling timber, and his spring board slipped. To save himself, he jumped to the ground, and in so doing cut off the tip of a finger with the ax he held. He had no sooner gone to camp than he received word that his wife was very ill at Buxton. He returned and found her suffering from an attack of appendicitis. She was brought down to Hillsboro, Saturday, and is improving.

Fred Enness, of this city, and who is in charge of the Hillsboro Lumber Co.'s logging operations above Buxton, came in Friday, to get repairs for the donkey engine, which was broken the last of the week. One of the logs brought down the latter part of the week had a diameter of six and one-half feet and was 24 feet in length, scaling 4,573 feet board measure. This is the biggest log yet shipped in over the P. R. & N.

Ferd Groner and Frank Rowell, Scholls millmen, were in the city Monday. They state that they have employed counsel and will test the law as to sawdust getting into the stream. They state that they built their dump so that with any common stage of water none could get in the stream.

C. H. Malcolm, of West Union, and who left a janitorship position with the Portland Trust Co. to try farming, was in Saturday, and says he wouldn't change back to the city for a good bit of an advance.

L. Meyer, of the Chehalem Mountain, was in Saturday, having finished hauling in his spuds. Mr. Meyer says he never figures less than $60 per acre on his potato crop.

Sam Johnson, of Shady Brook, was in Saturday. Sam comes from the section where the trout hold mass meetings protesting against the assembly plan, and he says they are rapidly ripening for April 1—tomorrow.

A. McCumsey, who has a crew of 10 men logging and lumbering up in the Mountindale section, was over to the city Saturday, laying in Easter supplies.

Luke Stewart, a son of the late Thos. Stewart, and now with the Portland Railway Co., was out from Portland, Monday, on business.

Miss Eunice Paisley, of Buxton, was in town Tuesday morning, enroute home after a visit with friends in Portland.

Grant Mann, of near Cornelius, was in town the last of the week.

LOOK

Just arrived from Old Kentucky Distillery and will be on sale every Saturday, regular $4.00 whiskey reduced to $3.00 a gallon. Regular $1.50 port wine at $1.00 a gallon.—C. Schilling, Cornelius.
