DROUGHT OF 52 DAYS WAS BROKEN MONDAY

Rainfall, However, Was Very Slight, in Many Places

BARELY ENOUGH TO LAY THE DUST

Dry Spell Exceeded by Only One Season Since Records Started

Oregon's drought of fifty-two days was broken Monday morning by a slight drizzle and sprinkle, which commenced about 8:30 and fell at intervals until about three o'clock. This is noted for being the second longest dry spell since the government bureau has kept records.

Notwithstanding the fact that there has been no precipitation the crops in Washington County are uniformly good, although in sections yields have not reached the total of last year. In places, however, they are better. The one thing that is suffering for moisture is the late potato crop and the rainfall of Monday was barely sufficient to bring the best results. In the hills, though, the precipitation was heavier than in the valley and along the rim of mountains the rainfall was enough to help late vegetables. Down this way there was barely enough to allay the dust, which has been very annoying to travelers. Down at Scholls, and in the Bull mountain section, there was enough rain to help both crops and comfort.

It has been 52 days since Washington County had its last rain, and this was so slight that only in a few places were the threshermen delayed. Eugene Dant, who was threshing at the Boscow place, at the edge of town, was held up a short time only, but was stopped for an hour or so next morning, owing to the heavy dew which fell in the extreme cool of the night. The moisture came with a north wind something quite uncommon in this section of the valley. There were genuine "thunderheads," all along the horizon Monday afternoon and evening, and this, too, was quite out of the general order, as these generally come with extreme warmth and south or southwest winds.

AN AGED PIONEER

Mrs. Julia Wilcox, one of Hillsboro's early pioneers, and who now resides in Portland, celebrated her 87th birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. C. Archbold, in this city, Aug. 16, 1910. Among her pioneer friends who were in attendance were: Mrs. Mary Moore, widow

No Match For a Woman

"I beg pardon, sir," he said, "but could you spare me a little of your time?"

"For what purpose, sir?"

"That is not easy to explain on the street. If you will step inside I will show you rather than tell you."

"Inside where?"

"Right here."

He pointed to an open door, and I could see a staircase. The building seemed to be unused.

There are people who seem to have a power to make other people obey them, not by force, not always by insistence. In this case the man was a gentleman in his request that I did not like to refuse him. At any rate, before I realized what I was doing I had gone to the upper floor of an unoccupied building with a person who had accosted me on the street and asked me to go with him, for what purpose he had not explained. This seems to me now absurd on the face of it, and at the time I knew that I should do no such thing, but I couldn't help it.

He took me into a room on the second floor. In its center was what looked to me to be a hot air furnace, only it was neither round nor square, but oblong. He closed the door behind us, and I heard a click. I didn't like it, for it sounded as though it came from a lock that closed automatically. I was about to turn and get out of the place, but my pride held me, and I waited to be informed further as to this strange proceeding. The gentleman led me to a corner of the room railed off apparently for an office, where there were chairs, and invited me to be seated.

"Do you see that oven?" he said. "Well, that has cost me a great deal of labor. Perhaps you think it is a crematory, but it is not. It is an oven for baking bread. A hundred loaves can be baked at once and in three minutes. That's 2,000 loaves an hour, and by working day and night three reliefs we have 28,000 loaves a day. Six working days give us 168,000 loaves a week. Fifty-two weeks produce 8,736,000 loaves a year.

"So much for what my oven will do. Now for my object. It is to feed the world. You see, my single oven is not large. Suppose there are ten of them in this building alone. That gives 87,360,000 loaves a year, only about 4,000,000 miles less than the distance of the earth from the sun."

Since I could see no relationship between loaves of bread and the earth's distance from the sun I began to feel a bit uncertain about the gentleman's upper story. So I said to him, rising:

"You'll have to excuse me, sir. It is not possible for me to remain any longer."

"But you have not examined my invention. Besides, I told you I wanted you for a purpose."

"What purpose?"

"Come, I will show you."

He led me to the oven. He seemed so harmless that I followed him. He threw open the door, displaying a number of iron shelves: I was somewhat relieved that there was no heat in the oven.

"My arrangement for heat is by chemical process. There are many substances that produce heat in combining chemically. Why should we burn coal? I turn this cock and my substances run together. In a short time I shall have my oven quite hot enough to do my baking."

"I wouldn't turn it on if I were you," I remarked, "since you have no bread ready for baking."

"I have something else. My desire is to bake a human being."

This was getting warm, as the children say when hunting for things in games. And, as the strange gentleman looked at me, indicating that I was the human being he proposed to bake, I felt not only warm, but a cold perspiration stood out on me, especially when he drew a long sharp knife with which to enforce his demands. I knew I had to deal with a lunatic and kept my head.

"I shall be happy," I said, "to have you bake me. On which shelf am I to take position?"

"Step in and I will show you."

"After you," I said deferentially, bowing and raising my hat.

He stepped into the furnace. I closed the door with a bang, and the big iron latch fell into position. Then the room swam, and I fell on the floor. But I did not remain there long. Fearful that the lunatic might smother, I ran to the door of the room, found it locked and could not open it. I tried a window, and that served a call through. In a few minutes a policeman came up the stairs, broke down the door and let the gentleman baker out. He was nearly suffocated and gave no trouble. He had employed men to build his oven without their having the slightest suspicion as to his sanity. I learned that he was a scientific man and had been an inventive genius as well. On my testimony he was committed to an asylum.

It makes me crawl when I think that by a mere act of politeness I was saved from death.

"After You, Sir"

By F. TOWNSEND SMITH

While sauntering leisurely along a thoroughfare, smoking largely for the purpose of killing time, I was accosted by a gentleman, well dressed man who doffed his hat before speaking to me.

"I beg pardon, sir," he said, "but could you spare me a little of your time?"

"For what purpose, sir?"

"That is not easy to explain on the street. If you will step inside I will show you rather than tell you."
