MILE ROCK ROAD
COMPLETE NEXT WEEK

Stretch to Dairy Creek Bridge
Nearly Finished

FIVE CARS DAILY NOW COMING

Fine Piece of Road Work and Promises
Endurance

Crushed rock at the rate of five cars daily from the Oswego quarry has been rolling into the Baseline crossing of the P. R. & N., this week, and a few days more of this average will see the stretch of road between the railway track and the Dairy Creek bridge completed. The road is a relief to those coming from the west with loads, and promises excellent endurance. When finished there will be considerably over a mile of plank and macadam for teamsters, and big loads can easily be handled.

The rock is being spread and rolled after the pattern of Multnomah county roadwork, and expert road men say it will stand traffic without any question.

Jed Nichodemus is still hauling water for moisture on the roadbed and Louis Ennes keeps the big seven ton steam roller going all day.

WEEK FROM TODAY

John D. Roselair is to hang one week from today, according to the sentence of Judge J. U. Campbell. Roselair has exhausted every avenue of appeal open to him, and has spent hundreds of dollars to defeat justice. Fifteen months and a fraction will have elapsed since he killed his young wife on his ranch above Timber. Quite a number from here will accompany Hancock to see the murderer swing on the gallows.

A CLEAN WATCH

means good time to you for years to come. True economy in a time-piece lies in cleanliness. The delicate parts doing indescribable work will soon wear themselves to ruin, destroy their high finish and perfect fit, when running in accumulating dirt and rancid oil. It will cost you nothing to let me examine it.—C. F. Libby, Jeweler, Hillsboro, Ore.

Joe Ingram, of Farmington, went up to Buck Mountain, Sunday, and brought in two fine bucks. This is pretty good going for one day.

HIRED APPLAUSE.

The Great Rachel Made the Earn Its Money.

Speaking of applause in the theatrical man relates the following concerning the great actress Rachel. "It seems that upon a certain evening night Rachel received with her a great deal of applause, but on the second night she was so noticeably stingy that she felt deeply grieved and bitterly complained that the claque was not doing its duty. The leader of the claque, a pleasure maker on hearing of this, wrote her a letter in which he endeavored to excuse himself from blame.

"Mademoiselle—I cannot remember the obloquy of a reproach of such lips as yours," he began. "The following is an authentic statement of what really took place. At the first representation I led the attack on my son not less than thirty-three times. We had three acclamations, three ovations, two thrilling moments, two renewals of applause and two magnificent explosions. In fact, to such extent did we carry our applause that the occupants of the stalls were dazzled and cried out at a pace.

"My men were positively exhausted with fatigue and even fatigued to such a degree that they could not again go through such an evening. Seeing such to be the case, I applied for the manager and after having profusely thanked the piece I was obliged to make to my mind for the second representation certain curtailments in the service of my men."

"The writer thus goes on at length to assure the actress he was trying to make future amends and requests her to believe in his professional admiration."—Exchange.

Passing:
Summer was a gay old number.
Little time for rest or slumber.
Something doing all the time.
Sleep was looked on as a crime.
Gay vacation, time of folly.
Put a man on melancholy.

At the place where people sat
Every mother's son and daughter
Danced away the happy season
Almost without rhyme or reason
Fished and firted, loafed and quarrelled
Some engagements are reported
Had a gay time

In the hay time
Of their young and careless lives
Picking husbands, picking wives
Happy, gaudy butterflies
Underneath the summer skies
From the cup of pleasure
Of the future little thinks.

In the chase to get a living
On the trolley
Or the gaudy touring car
Hitched securely to a star
Eating, drinking, laughing, smoking
At the wise and thoughtful joking
But the season has departed
Well may gay ones be downhearted
Now has come the season sober
Cool September, then October
These are days to get the money
Back to books and back to school
Each one striving with his neighbor
Striving, driving, tanning, striving
In the chase to get a living
Pupils, with their books freely strewn
Oil their minds by summer rest
Business calls, the men get busy
Quite forgetting Kate and Lizzie
All around we see the charade
That the newer deal arrange
Now the leaves begin to rust
And we shed our coats and hats
