Persons living in the country and wishing to take the Daily and Sunday Oregonian for one year can, by paying a year in advance, get the Argus and an Oregonian map, or chart, for the one price. This offer will not last long—so get in your order soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Waggener, for many years conducting the Tualatin Hotel, were in the city Monday, returning from an extended visit on Puget Sound and British Columbia. They are spending a few days at Kinton, the guest of their daughter, Mrs. C. E. Kindt, and while here were guests of their daughter, Mrs. O. B. Gates.

Nathan Noland, of Cornelius, was in town Saturday. Noland came to Oregon in 1852, when he was eleven years of age. In the sixties he ran a pack train between Red Bluff, Cal., and Eastern Oregon, Baker City being his farthest Eastern point. He made twelve trips between these two points, and says that he never felt exactly at home until he came down the pike into the Willamette Valley section.

Listen to what J. C. Lamkin says: "Well, sir, you may talk about pretty sights, but when I was up on Bald Peak, Chehalem Mountain, last week, I saw one that I will never forget. Early in the morning the sun shone brightly on the elevation and below, on all sides the valleys were obscured by fog. The top of Bald Peak looked just as though it were an island, and the fog below, with the glint of the sunshine, looked like a great ocean of water. When you consider that this was the condition all around the mountain, no matter which way you looked, you can imagine that it was a sight long to be remembered."

Why Not Woman's Suffrage?

(An address given recently at the Y. M. C. A. hall in Portland by Clarence True Wilson, D. D.)

When two armies face each other in battle the army of aggression, before it can engage the main body, must drive in the skirmish lines of the enemy. The woman's suffrage propaganda has thrown out certain skirmish lines in the public thought and these must be driven in before we can come to the main argument. First, then, those who claim that the ballot is women's right quote from the declaration of independence that "Taxation without representation is tyranny." But the quotation is not in point, for that sentiment was uttered with no possible reference to individual voters, male or female. It was a declaration of the representatives of the 13 colonies could have a representative in the parliament and in the cabinet to protect their interests. King George should not ask us to pay duty. It had no reference to the casting of ballots for men voted in every colony, but it was a declaration that one government ought not to tax another without due representation.

Protection for Women

In order to make it refer to woman's suffrage it would have to be proven that women are not now properly represented by their husbands, fathers or brothers, that the government does not protect them in their property interests, and that they do not get value received for their money.

The question of voting has no reference to the paying of taxes. We pay our taxes in return for the protection to life and property, by the laws of a civilized nation. Some men who have no property vote and many who have no vote pay large taxes. Numerous young men and women, heirs to large estates, pay immense sums to the government, but have no vote. Corporations pay immense sums in taxes, but have no vote. Persons residing in foreign lands or who have lived in this country only a few years pay taxes, but have no vote. In fact voting has no reference whatever to taxes.
