Deputy District Attorney Tongue Files Suit in Roselair Case

WANTS COST OF MURDER TRIAL

Jeffrey, Murderer's Attorney, Served With Summons, Tuesday

Deputy District Attorney T. H. Tongue, Tuesday, filed a case in the circuit court, asking that the county be awarded its costs in the celebrated Roselair murder trial. The county's costs in the case reached $807.25, including the expense of fighting the appeal to the Supreme Court. The complaint asks that the farm above Baxton be sold, and the proceeds divided as follows:

First—That John Ritter, of Helvetia, and who has a mortgage, be paid in full.

Second—That the county of Washington be reimbursed $807.25 for its costs in convicting and sending Roselair to the gallows.

Third—That J. A. Jeffrey's deed, executed by Roselair, be then paid, and the residue, if any, be paid over to Roselair's legal heirs. Roselair's attorney will no doubt contest the case with much strenuousness, but there is a law saving that the state has a first lien against the property of a felon as it stood at the commitment of the crime.
