FEED STORE MAN IS UNDER ARREST

S. F. Weyrick Charged With Obtaining Money by Fraud

BANK SAYS MADE FALSE STATEMENT
Listed His Assets as Worth About Fifteen Thousand Dollars

Constable McQuillan went to Eugene the last of the week and returned with S. F. Weyrick, formerly in the feed business, both here and at North Plains. Weyrick bought out the G. A. Webb feed store, on Second street, some time last year, and did what was apparently a thriving business. Later he bought, or contracted to buy, a site at North Plains, and built a store there. Opening a business at that point, and still conducting the local business in Hillsboro, Weyrick was about as busy as they make them.

A few weeks after locating at North Plains he was forced into bankruptcy upon suit brought by creditors. The bankruptcy proceedings came before H. T. Bagley, and everything was getting along swimmingly for Weyrick until the Hillsboro National Bank commenced to look into things. They went into court and showed that Weyrick had gone to the bank and signed a certification of assets at something like $15,000, and liabilities of but a few hundred. Upon this statement he was given a loan of $1,000. When the referee in bankruptcy came to the real assets schedule and it was ascertained by the bank, criminal proceeding at once were started.

Weyrick was taken before Judge Smith, who fixed the bond at $1,000. Failing in getting a bond he was taken to the county jail, Weyrick alleged he had property in Missouri—80 acres—and some land in Virginia, and it is stated that he represented that his North Plains property was paid for, when, it is said, he had but a small equity in the holding.

"In the 26 years that I've been in Washington County, I've never witnessed a better grain crop prospect than is in evidence this year. In several trips across the northern portion of the county I have found oats and wheat looking splendid, and all grain is filling finely. I think that the general yield will exceed any year of the past twenty-six," was the remark of Wm. Bagley, the hopgrower, Tuesday.

If you want to raise good clean fruit, you must use the best of Arsenate of Lead—and that is the Grassell's Neutral. I have used it for many years and find it the very best. I have it for sale.—B. Leis, Beaverton, Ore.

There will be a picnic at Kinton, under the auspices of the Kinton Union Sunday School, Saturday, July 22. The program will begin at 11:00 in the morning, and the Kinton Band will furnish the music. The public is cordially invited.

BEAUTY IN UGLINESS

By ELLA B. CHEEVER
Copyright by American Press Association 1911.

Professor Blinder was a farmer's boy made into an archaeologist. He worked his way through college, sometimes teaching the little country boys and girls near the university where he studied, sometimes following the plow, but oftener doing odd jobs which would not interfere with his university courses. He was red headed, freckled and otherwise unattractive in personal appearance, except for the intellect that looked out through his eyes. When he smiled he resembled a pumpkin with a candle in it, such as boys use to celebrate Allhallow eve.

Professor Blinder while in college was principally interested in buried things, and the longer they had been under ground the better he liked them. He read so many books about buried cities that after his graduation he was chosen to go abroad with a party of archaeologists to discover the site of lost Greek cities mentioned by historians. He told the party where many of these cities were, and they found them. When he returned he was made professor of archaeology in a woman's college. The girls declared that he had been appointed because none of them would be tempted to run away with him.

One day after recitation Eva Lambert, whose talents ran rather to mischief than books, went up to the professor's lecture table after the lecture, ostensibly to ask a question, but really to poke fun at him. "Professor," she said, "did the early Christians dig out the catacombs of Rome to bury their dead in?" "That's the story," replied the professor, "but it seems to me more likely that they were old quarries and the Christians found them ready for their purpose, though they greatly extended them. There's too much glamour about archaeological stories. Nevertheless the catacombs are interesting, even if they were originally quarries. It is the pleasure we take in deciphering inscriptions and such matters pertaining to the dead placed there centuries ago that interests us, as well as the skeletons of the dead themselves. The catacombs to me are more fascinating than the Lake of Como, the bay of Naples or the Swiss Alps. Beauty is passive; there is nothing about it to learn, to conquer. There is no beauty in the catacombs, but there is the liveliest interest. For instance, when we see the outline of a fish scratched on the wall over a sarcophagus we are eager to know what it means. And when we have learned that we find something else we wish to interpret?" "What does a fish mean?" asked Miss Lambert, becoming interested.

"It was a sign of the early Christians and indicated that the buried one was a follower of Jesus. But, to return to the matter of the difference between the beautiful and the interesting. Two young students of geology recently took luncheon on a stone. It was a common stone apparently, like any other stone. One of the students thought it resembled a fossilized bone. Chipping off a few bits of it, they took it to their college laboratory, tested it and found that it was a bone. It turned out to be the paw of an extinct dinosaur that had lived millions of years ago. There was no beauty in it, but it was fascinating."

"I should say so. Was it taken out?" "Yes, and removed to a museum." By this time the girls had all left the lecture room. The professor went on talking.

"If you ever go to Pompeii, buried by an eruption of Vesuvius seventy-five years after the birth of Christ, you will see a plaster cast of a man. Some may prefer the statue of the Apollo Belvedere, possibly the most beautiful figure in existence. My taste leads me to the Pompeian cast. It represents only a common man and is rough at that. The figure it represents was a man who when Pompeii was being covered with ashes and mud was attempting to escape, but fell and was enveloped in the mud. This casting hardened and formed a mold of the body. Eighteen hundred years later the body had disappeared in gases, plaster was poured into the mold, and we got a replica of the Pompeian as he died."

"And yet how homely!" "No, no, no! How can that which is so full of interest be homely?" "If you are interested in these things I shall be glad to tell you of them. There is much in my lectures that is necessarily dry, but any day after the class is dismissed, if you have any question to ask, any information to gain about these archaeological subjects, remain for awhile and I will doubtless be able to inform you of these things, ugly in themselves, as you say, but beautiful from the interest they excite."

When Miss Lambert left Professor Blinder's lecture room she found a number of her classmates waiting to enjoy her account of how she bamboozled the archaeologist. They were very much surprised when she said: "Girls, I didn't get in a single bamboozle. On the contrary, he proved in a very ingenious way that he is beautiful."

"Beautiful!" exclaimed several girls. "For pity's sake, how did he do that?" "He told me of ugly things so interesting that they seem to be beautiful. I consider him one of them."

A year from that date Eva Lambert married Professor Blinder.
