One evening last week W. W. Boscow placed $120 in gold in the pocket of a new suit, hanging on the sales frames in the Allen & Wright Store, caching the money there because the banks were closed. He left the coin in the pocket over night, and concluded that it would be safe until after he had gone for his mail, and settled a few committee duties. He was absent from the store quite a while, and finally thought it about time to return and take charge of his money, as some one might accidentally pick out the particular suit. The unexpected had happened. While out, Walker, second baseman for the Cardinals, tried on the suit, thought it looked all right, bargained for it, and, suddenly running his hand into the pocket, brought out the wallet, saying, "Well, I suppose this goes with the suit?" Investigation discovered the identity of the depositor and Wesley thinks he was very fortunate in his financial ventures.

James Wilson is under $500 bail to appear before Circuit Judge Campbell to answer a charge of contempt of court. When his wife, Vida M., sued him for divorce, she asked for and received an order enjoining Wilson from annoying or interfering with her in any manner. She swears that on July 1, Wilson followed her for several blocks, and finally assaulted Jesse Conway, a cousin with whom she was walking; and that further, on July 4, while she was walking with George Ringle, he followed her, and when she kicked at him, said "I'll give you what you've been looking for," and threatened to strike her. A warrant was issued, and C. E. Koontz and F. W. Phillips went on the bond. The restraining order was made at the time the divorce case was filed, and the records show that a copy of the injunction was served upon the husband. Judge Campbell will not be here for several days.

A gun which was brought to the coast in 1844 by Jacob Cline, father of Mrs. S. M. Tunstall, is in possession of the Tunstall family, and it still shoots as accurately as it did when it killed deer and antelope coming across the plains. It is said to have "downed" its buffalo, as well, and probably has killed more beavers than any other cap and ball gun ever in Oregon. In 1873 it was turned over to the Tunstall family, of Phillips, and has been doing veteran service ever since. Whether or not it was an old firearm when it was brought to Sauvie's Island by Cline, back in the 40's, is not known as there is no date on the weapon.

The Oregon Jersey Cattle Club will meet at the Washington Hotel for a luncheon, at noon, Saturday, July 15. Some interesting papers will be read, relative to breeding, Oregon Jersey history, etc., and after the session the assembly will visit the herd of T. Withycombe and Son, at the Deercombe Farm, near Farmington. Several prominent breeders have signified an intention to be present, and it is possible that William Ladd, a noted breeder, will be in attendance.
