If Theodore had just pursued Bryan's course the Chicago convention might have resulted differently.

The presidential fight is now on. Taft heads the conservatives, and Woodrow Wilson heads the progressives. Taft will undoubtedly get the support of the "interests," and they will be as vindictive against Wilson as against Bryan. Roosevelt will remain in the field, and will take states here and there. The nomination of Wilson, however, has done much to take the wind out of the Roosevelt sails.

W. J. Bryan was the only real heroic figure in the two great National conventions which have just sent their messages to a waiting people. Wall Street, back of Tammany Hall, and with its aid, and that of the Virginia delegation, split the progressives in twain, giving Clark ninety votes of the Empire state in exchange for the New York vote for Clark as a candidate. Bryan was the one man with the courage to stand up and fight the interests as they were never before fought. He kept his temper and serenity, and fought to the last ditch. The alliance with New York east Champ Clark the nomination. Wilson was nominated through Bryan's powerful support, and that is all that can be said. When Bryan denounced Belmont and Ryan he thrilled the masses of the American people. Neither jeers nor hoots, nor attitudes of violence, swayed the great commoner, and he proved his genuine worth. He proved the convention absolutely progressive with no Tammany strings attached. On the level, now, wouldn't it have been fine for the democrats to have named a progressive, and in proclaiming it, to have received the retort, "Yes, I observe that Wall Street's agent, Tammany, was chiefest in naming the candidate." This Fourth of July has significance in lieu of the fact that there is a presidential candidate in the field who will be fought by Wall Street.

J. L. Stannard, civil engineer in charge of the gravity system survey for Hillsboro, was in town Monday. Mr. Stannard says that scores of farmers along the line have put in application for water from the new pipeline. Cornelius voted for the bonds Monday, and the corporation will take water from the new system. The vote was 66 for the $10,500 bond issue for the circulating system to H against it. The pipe line between here and Forest Grove, which is to supply Hillsboro with water until the Sain creek line is completed, will be finished inside of three or four weeks, workmen pushing the ditching and laying as rapidly as possible.

J. C. Smith, the former Greenville, now running a livery at Forest Grove, was down Tuesday evening. He was kicked by a horse the other day, and suffered a broken arm a broken rib, and an injured leg. He was so dazed that he did not know what had happened until Emmott Quick had him well along on the way home. The accident took place at the Forest Grove livery.

A young son of Conrad Wolf, of Phillips, fell on an axe the other day, and nearly severed the muscle of his upper arm, one day last week. Dr. J. P. Tamsie attended the injury, which is a severe one.

J. C. Lamkin yesterday received the intelligence of the death of Henderson Callahan, husband of his cousin, Mrs. Nanie Callahan, of Seattle. Interment will be in Southern Oregon. Death ensued at Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Jacobs returned to Portland, Sunday, after a few days' visit with their son, D. O. Jacobs, and wife.

Born to L. H. Williams and wife, of Corvallis, July 1, 1912, a son.

Washington County is sporting a fine new flag at the mast on the court house.

George Bacon, of Yamhill, was down to the city yesterday.

The Argus goes to press a day early this week—it's Fourth of July, you know.

The county commissioners' court is in session this week, beginning yesterday morning.

Geo. Dearbaugh and Sahn Blank, of Forest Grove, have been granted license to wed.

Andrew J. Sanders, of Buxton, and Annie Hunt, recently from the East, have been granted marriage license.

Frank Helvoigt, of near Keedville, has been ordered committed to the Oregon State Hospital at Salem.

Harry Kerr, a nephew of W. T. Kerr, of near North Plains, died Wednesday morning from hemorrhage of the stomach. Two physicians were in attendance, but the loss of blood could not be stayed. The young man's home is in the East, and he had been here but a few months.

What Isn't Printed.
The headlines tout of mystery and lunacy.
Of suicides and murders and a few. And people read the paper, flaring and soot. "What is the country coming to?"
But each of all the crime and seeming that.
The ministers disordered to well blood news.
And thirty millions wait for peace and quiet.
The papers don't print that, "swain's news."
The moral? Well, the moral is, Don't worry.
The papers print the news they think we should not get into of persons in a hurry. But still the old world's doing pretty well.
—Boston.

Earning a Breakfast.
"Can you give me something to eat, ma'am?" asked the tramp at the kitchen door.
"Are you willing to work for it?" asked the lady with the gingham apron.
"I certainly am."
"Well, those boys here out there haven't had an egg in a month. If you go out there and induce them to lay a dozen eggs I'll give you one."
—Yonkers Statesman.

Without You.
Without you, the day would hold no light.
The kindly stars would vanish from the night.
The flowers would forget to wake at morn.
The sun the sleeping leaving out the dawn.
—Without you
—National Magazine.

Different.
"What's the matter with you?"
"I'm mad clear through. I happened to be crossing the street, and an automobile threw mud all over me."
"Well, look here, your automobile threw mud all over me yesterday."
"That's different. You're a pedestrian. You ought to know enough to get out of the way."
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Very Simple.
"You ask me how to see and win with 'em, don't you?"
"First you must think there's no one in the world but you."
"But I have got that far," quoth Jack.
"Then, sir, next thing to do is make me think there's no one in the world but you."
—Boston Transcript.

Ages in the Wrong Place.
"Private" John Allen went to visit an old friend at a hospital in New Orleans. The invalid was being fed on a diet of egg and sherry, and Allen asked him how he liked it.
"John," said the friend sadly, "it would be all right if the egg was as old as the sherry and the sherry as old as the egg."
—Pajama Magazine.

That Is Love.
There was a young fellow named Pitch
A maid carried his heartstrings to pitch.
He sat by her side,
And fondly he cried,
"I love every hair in your switch."
—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Up to Date Salesmanship.
Mr. Wisely—I want to rent an auto that will break down.
The Liveryman—An auto that will break down?
Mr. Wisely—Yes. Then when the crowd gathers around me I'll sell 'em my wonderful hydro-electric fly swatter for the small sum of one dime.
—Washington Star.

All Patented.
Said the famous inventor, "What use are all my inventions? The device is always to pay.
When out late I stay,
For I cannot invent an excuse."
—Judge.

Knew When She Was Well Off.
"I'm sure I don't want to vote," said the young woman decisively.
Of course the other one had to ask "Why?"
"If I were a voter I suppose I'd have to read all these long political speeches that the papers print just as the men do."
—Buffalo Express.

Her Wants.
"Man wants but little here below,"
To pleasant make his lot,
But what a woman wants depends
On what her neighbor's got.
—Houston Post.

Sad Outlook.
Hobo (looking up from his newspaper)—
Pretty soon there'll be no place in the world where it'll be safe for a man to stay. The paper is full of automobile accidents, railway smashups and chances to work.
—Heller's Welt.
