Gov. West says he will not again be a candidate for Governor. This will mean a rush of republican candidates, for West would be a hard man to beat, with all his eccentricities. The little man appears to have the confidence of all the people, except a few and the oldtime politicians.

People of this section should begin to think seriously of exhibits for the coming street fair. It must be the one best fair, for we have the products, and with this should ripen the interest that never fails. The poultry association will do its part to make the big show a success. Now let us hope the producers will awaken to the necessity of a good display.

Notwithstanding the big newspapers are working overtime trying to get up interest in support of the administration there appears to be very little enthusiasm for Mr. Taft. This may change, of course, when they get the big scare started, but the Roosevelters say they are not to be frightened, and the Wilson people are serene in the hopes of the Jersey man's candidacy. The days of big scares seems to have run its course.

D. W. Bath, well known to Hillsboro and North Plains newspaper readers, will soon leave for Tacoma to join his wife and son. Mr. Bath for several years edited the Independent, the contemporary of the Argus, and the most cordial relations always existed between the two representatives of newspaperdom. Going from here to Cottage Grove, and thence to North Plains, wherever Mr. Bath has been he has always had in mind the best interests of the publishing point. May his shadow never grow less, and when he passes, like Ben Abou, may his "name lead all the rest."

Wm. Goodin, of Cornelius, was a county seat visitor Saturday.

O Nordlund was up from near Santa Rosa, this morning.

Born, Aug. 20, 1912, to O N Priekett and wife, of Laurel, at Hillsboro, a son. The little one lived but an hour.

Mrs. A. B. Bailey and son, Bruce, of Portland, are visiting at the Dr. F. A. Bailey home, after a vacation at Tillamook.

Geo Sinclair, of North Tualatin Plains, and Alec Gordon, of beyond North Plains, were in town this morning.

Mrs. Biggers, wife of Dr. Geo. Biggers, of LaGrande, was in the city this week, the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Abbott.

The Wm. Bagley Sr., hopyard will begin picking at Leisby, August 29. Mr. Bagley so stated yesterday morning, when in the city.

Frank Erwin, the eldest son of F. L. Erwin, of near Cornelius, badly snagged his foot while in bathing the first of the month. He was brought to Hillsboro and attended by Dr. F. A. Bailey.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson departed today for St. Paul, via the Oregon Electric and Hill lines. From St. Paul they will go to Chicago, and from there to near Lincoln, Neb., where they will visit relatives of Mr. Johnson. They expect to be absent several weeks.

W. V. Kirkland and brother, H. H. Kirkland, of Portland, returned Monday from a six days' drive to Tillamook. They made the trip in via the Wilson River, where roads are reported rather bad, and returned via Sheridan, where they say they had good wheeling all the time. H. H. returned to his Portland home, the same evening, and both were much pleased with their trip.

Mrs. J. W. Connell and children returned yesterday from a visit with the Essners, at Mountaintop. Mrs. Connell was accompanied home by her mother, Mrs. Essner, and her aunt, Mrs. C. E. Donaldson, of San Francisco. Mrs. Donaldson has been visiting her sister for the past six weeks, and will depart for her California home the first of the week.

It takes five different aged whiskies to make Cyrus Noble—each one good in itself. But it takes blending and re-ageing to bring out the best in each—to "round out" the flavor.

Why punish yourself with rough, high-proof, strong whiskey when you can get Cyrus Noble everywhere?

that we have a sort of uneasy feeling when we run across it.

It isn't the sort of thing you do that counts so much as the sticking to it.

If you set the food you are due to get the fool's reward.

A girl isn't always what she paints herself.

One's enjoyment of a joke depends largely upon which direction the point of the gibe takes.

The Rule Slips.

Be good and you'll be happy
We know it's true.
When one could take for half a dime
Home from the little store
A steak delectable and sweet
To feed the hungry brood.
Whose only purpose was to eat
A helping lot of food?

In days that not so distant are
The days of dirty clothes
Could fill the laundry bin
And make some piteous noise.
Buy ham and add her Sunday roast,
A little bit of cheese
And have enough for breakfast toast.
Her family to please.

It didn't take in times gone by
Half of your monthly rent
To buy the chicken for a pie
Or fill the family board.

With pork and beans, enough to still
Your tender mothering eye
Ten cents would let them eat their fill,
Nor pass the puppy by.

But down the chute of Father Time,
Those good old days have sped
In every country, every town,
Down to the last lone old.

One has to dig to get enough
To buy a bit of lamb
That sport, is why we make a blaff,
But pass up steaks and jam.

Suppose you have a dinner
That doesn't rest somehow,
That causes round your stomach
And tries to raise a row.

That gives you indigestion
And makes the world look dark,
How can you then go looking
As joyous as a lark?

But though misfortunes follow,
Let it be understood
That isn't any reason
That you should not be good.

If you had been as wicked
As though it were your trade

You might have been unhappy
Without misfortune's aid.

Just Like a Woman!

"Now those things are all spoiled," petulantly declared the wife.

"Well, you insisted on leaving them out overnight," patiently replied her careful husband. "I merely let you have your way about it."

"That's just like the brute you are,"

sobbed the irate woman. "You shouldn't have let me have my way

about it."

"He hasn't got good sense."

"Who? Percy?"

"Yes, Percy. He doesn't know a stupid thing."

"Oh, yes, he does. He always knows what kind of sauce goes with any kind of meat."

Often the Most Powerful.

"One editorial made him dozens of friends."

"What one was it?"

"One he didn't write."

Explained.

"She's an actress."

"I wondered what made her act so."

Real Sweetness.

He praised her eyes he praised her nose.

He said her lips were sweet as honey.

But all the time would you suppose

That he was thinking of her money?
