While the rains have cost thousands in the matter of clover hay, yet it is a conservative estimate that the moisture has effected five dollars worth of benefit to one of loss. Besides, those who have lost their clover can more than get it back by the sale of clover seed, which can be harvested during the dry months.

Portland's many junkshops and second-hand stores have long been fences for suburban robberies. Some of these days these places will be put out of business, or forced to call the police every time some fellow comes along with merchandise for sale. Many robbers make these places headquarters for their loot.

Your Uncle James J. Hill, of the Hill Lines, is graduating into optimism these days. He says that crops are good everywhere, and that there is no necessity for worry. He also tells us something that every able-minded man, and half the fools have known for years—"that Wall Street people do not know what they want, and that they are more or less foolish."

Portland now has commission form of government, although the man who stood for it against all odds, Rushlight, will now step down to private life. When the "big fellows" were against it Rushlight stood for it, and finally forced it through to a vote. It cost him his return, but in the new form of city administration he has left a monument that will long endure.

Gettysburg is now the scene of a great reunion of the blue and the gray, and the greatest family quarrel the world ever witnessed is forever stilled. Its tragedies are forgotten, and the mantle of national love hovers over the grief of a hundred battle-fields. There is occasionally a politician who remembers the late unpleasantness when he is seeking a few votes, and an occasional writer in newspapers who still harks back to the Civil War, but, thankfully, these are few and far between. Today the ex-Confederate and veteran who wore the blue are camping under the stars that shine above Gettysburg, and the nation is at peace.

The United States has endured one hundred and thirty-seven years, and the predictions of disasters by those in high places have miserably failed of fruition. It was said that a republic could not live; that there would be internal dissensions that would wreck the union; and that at the best there would be such a poor government that the country would go to a monarchy, or return to the rule of the mother country. Notwithstanding the country had a bloody civil war it has endured as built upon the foundation made by the fathers, and it is today the premier republic of the world. Thus did prophecy fail and Americanism prevail against the odds of great wealth and weak-backed citizenry.

C. B. Stokes has won in his first chapter of proceedings against Wm. Geiger, Judge Reasoner having appointed Lincoln Geiger guardian of the person and estate of the brother. Attorney Manche Langley filed a petition with Dr. Geiger as the sole petitioner, and the Court then adhered to his original selection. Lincoln Geiger did not wish to act, but advised the Court that he would, under the circumstances, as he believed that it would be a matter of economy to the estate. It is expected that Stokes will file his damage suit, the result of being shot into by mistake, as soon as the bond is filed. If the brother does not qualify, another appointment will be made.

The other day when the wind was rolling up from the south and it was absolutely sure to rain, one of our near sighted oldtimers was standing across the street from the Hillsboro Mercantile window, where three or four streamers flow out from an electric fan. The streamers blow due south. The oldtimer was not close enough to see the window, but he could see the streamers, and, being a believer in no rain when the wind comes from Columbia County, said: "Rain? Rain, your grandmother! Can't you see that the wind is coming right straight off of Alaska? What in the world is the matter with you tenderfeet, anyway?"

Fritz Buhlmann, aged 58, a laborer, was today adjudged insane, Dr. Bailey being the examining physician. The patient has been in Oregon 22 years, and has been residing near Cooper Mountain. He threatens the Russians, his aberration running to animosity to that nationality. His property is worth about $250. Buhlmann is a bachelor.

The members of the Christian Endeavor of the Congregational Church gave Miss Blanche Harbison and Mr. John Bergen a reception, Tuesday evening, in honor of their impending nuptials. They were presented with a silver tray, suitably engraved. Music and games were enjoyed, and at the close of the evening the guests were banqueted.

J. N. Hoffman, the Forest Grove attorney and former publisher of the Press, was in town today. He has patented and is now manufacturing a patent rule cutter for printing offices, and his first dozen will be here soon. It cuts to a mitre, and sells for $2.50, about five times cheaper than any other machine of its kind.

Mrs. C. C. Smith returned the first of the week from an extended stay in Idaho, where she was called to attend the deathbed of her father.

Mrs. Jas. Miltenberger gave a surprise to her husband, Tuesday evening, in honor of his birthday. Whist was played and refreshments served at a late hour.

Take a day off and celebrate.
