HILLSBORO, OREGON, SEPTEMBER 18, 1913

NO. 26

JUDGE F. J. TAYLOR KILLED AT ASTORIA

Former Circuit Judge For
This Judicial District

DIED AT SANDY OLDS' TRIAL

Rancher Whose Wife Had Long
Age Retained Taylor

Circuit Judge Frank J. Taylor of Astoria, was shot and killed by Oswald Hansen, nine o'clock Sunday morning. The murderer is a rancher, has a residence at Clatsop, below the seaport city, and the victim near the S. P. railroad depot, and without opened fire. The bullet struck Taylor above the left eye, causing instant death. Hansen threw his revolver into the air and started away. He was caught by bystanders and handed over to the sheriff. Hansen alleges that Taylor separated from his family. There is to be no color to the statement, outside the bare fact that Taylor was retained by Mrs. Hansen in a divorce case, some time ago, the complaint after-wards being withdrawn.

Taylor held circuit court in this city twenty years and more, and presided at the famous trial when Sandy Olds was at bar of justice answering the charge of killing Emil Weber, a land gambler. Taylor's murderer is not bald in his mind, and several times there had been talk of incarcerating him in an asylum. Mrs. Hansen says he is not insane at all, but that he is simply crazed. She states that he has recently threatened to kill her, with whom she says she never spoke, excepting when she went to him to get him to prepare the papers in the divorce case. That was several years ago. Hansen fired three shots into Taylor, the one which ended his life, one in the breast, and one in his right arm.

J. J. Roberts, Owner.
J. W. Hughes, Auctioneer.
Otto Galloway, Clerk.

Adam Bell, of Centerville, was in town the last of the week.

Miss Stella Smith, of Portland, was the guest of Miss Ona Foord, Saturday.

A. L. Holcomb and wife, of Bethany, were in the city Saturday.

W. C. Jackson, of North Plain, was over to Hillsboro Saturday morning.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that the last half of the taxes where half payment has been made for the levy on the 1912 tax-roll, is now due and payable before the first Monday in October, 1913, which said date is October 6, and in case of delinquency after that date the law requires a penalty of 10 per cent, of said unpaid tax and interest charge of one per cent, per month until such taxes have been paid.

J. E. Reeves,
Sheriff and Tax Collector for Washington County, Oregon.
Dated at Hillsboro, this 10th day of September, 1913.

Some sneak thief entered the home of Donald McLeod, Friday afternoon, and stole two ten-dollar gold pieces, a diamond ring, and a pair of cuff-buttons. Sheriff Reeves was notified and went to the house, where he found a bicycle left by the burglar. Upon investigation the Sheriff found that the fellow had rented the wheel from the Haskell shop, paying him fifty cents for it. No trace of the man was found, although a party boarded the evening train at Cornelius, paid his fare to Portland, and left the electric car somewhere between Hillsboro and Ninth Street, so the conductor said. The thief probably saw the Sheriff get on the train at Hillsboro, and concluded to get off and avoid arrest. It is apparent that the party must have known something about the money in the house, although a stranger to the Haskell shop people.

I represent Spirilla corsets—not sold in stores. Will call at homes on request, and do the fitting, and teach how to adjust and wear the corset. Our tailored-made-to-measure corsets, including the latest front lace, with an experienced corsetier service, cost no more than high class corsets purchased in stores. Mrs. M. E. Caudle, Hillsboro, Fifth and Jackson Streets, Phone No. 584.

Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Waggener, of Newport, were in the city the first of the week, guests of their daughter, Mrs. O. B. Gates. They departed Tuesday for a trip to their old home near Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Waggener has not been back to the old state for 40 years, and he anticipates an enjoyable visit. He chose this season of the year when the butternuts and hickory nuts are ripening, and there are no hot days nor warm nights to make things uncomfortable, and if he can't get back to boyhood at this season of the year it will not be his fault. Miss Wilma Waggener, of Albany College, was here Sunday to visit them before their departure East.

Will sell from 5 to 10 acres, with neat, new, modern house of six rooms with bath. Plastered. Piped for water and gas. One mile from town. Berries and young fruit trees, and 8,000 strawberry plants. Ideal place for chicken ranch. Best of reasons for selling.—John Becker, Hillsboro, Ore., Route 3. 21tf

Jake Milne is congratulating himself on the fact that all his grain is threshed, and, besides, he has ten tons of clover seed ready for the market. If clover runs as high in the seed this year as it did last season, this ten-ton lot will mean considerable money. There are hundreds upon hundreds of acres of clover seed this season, and the scarcity of clover hullers makes it rather hard on the producers. The hullers can not as a rule begin threshing until about ten o'clock, and they must close down at five. Three weeks of steady run will not more than clean up the Washington County crop, this year, and even then some will not get their crop hulled.

If you want a range that beats the world for the money, call on David Corwin, Bank Annex Building, and see his Quality Ranges, all the way from $25 to $55. These are the best ranges ever placed on the market in Hillsboro. Call in and see them.

Thrashing machines are not as numerous this season, several of the older ones being out of commission. This has made thrashing a slow proposition this year, and as the straw was very long, machines could not be crowded as in the past.

For sale: Number of grade Cotswold bucks, yearlings in February and March next, out of Registered sire.—R. J. Schwanke, near Schiefelin Station, Cornelius, Ore., Route 1. Telephone C. 15, Hillsboro. 24-6

W. N. Hathorn, of Laurel, was in the city Saturday. He said the small yards over that way had finished, and that the larger ones were due to wind up the first of the week.

I saw cordwood, poles up to 12 inches in diameter, fence rails, and boards of all kinds, into stovewood lengths. Will go into the country. Write, phone or call on me.—Carl Skow, Hillsboro. Phone, City 146.

Miss Eva Weathered, stenographer in the M. L. Pipes law offices, Portland, concluded her vacation Saturday, and is again at her desk.

For Sale—Fresh milk cows. Herd of good cows from which to select.—C. H. Epler, Iowa Hill, or Cornelius, Route 2—six miles south of Cornelius. 26-8

SOUTHERNER PASSES IN YAMHILL COUNTY

Was Well Known at Oreno,
Where he Worked for Nursery Co.

HEART WAS BACK IN TENNESSEE

Wrote Poem Short Time Before Death,
Telling of Return Hope

Many people in Hillsboro will remember William Osborne, an orchardist who worked at Oreno some years ago, for the nursery, later going to McMinnville and taking charge of the St. Joe Orchards Tracts for a land-estate company. He was aged 71 years, and had always enjoyed fair health. One day last week Mr. Osborne was sitting in the Dixon Garage, at McMinnville, waiting for an auto to start for Briedwell. He was noticed to reel in his chair, and friends rushed to where he was sitting, only to find the old gentleman had passed away.

He came to Oregon from Kentucky about ten years ago. He made his home in Memphis, Tenn., when a young man, and his wife and two children had passed before he came West. He always talked of returning to the Sunny South, and a short time before he died he wrote a letter to the editor of the Telephone-Register, in which were the following lines:

Some Day

I am going back to Dixie where my heart has ever been,
Where the mocking bird is singing in the honeysuckle vine,
Near the window of the cottage, near the millwheel on the stream,
Where the swallows wing their flight in the sunny skies so bright,
And the giant beetles drone a sad good-night.
Yes, I am going back to Dixie to lay my old bones there,
Where my forebears and my kindred sleep so sweet in Dixie fair—
I am going back to Dixie when my work out here is done—
I am going back to Dixie, there to meet the "Setting Sun."

WILLIS D. HOAG GETS $30,000.00

Jury in Judge McGinn's Court at Portland Made Award Friday

DAMAGES FOR PERSONAL INJURIES

Local Man Gets Largest Verdict of Its Kind Ever Given in the State

Willis D. Hoag, of Hillsboro, was given a verdict of $30,000 against the Washington-Oregon Corporation, last Friday, for personal injuries received July 23, 1912, while working on the company's power line at the Cornelius sub-station. Supt. Turner, Art Gilmore, W. J. Moon and W. D. Hoag were fixing up connections to carry power westward from Cornelius. Just about quitting time Moon went up one pole to fasten a connection, and Hoag climbed another to take up a loose end, dangling downward. In some manner, while handling the wire, Hoag tangled it with the power wire that ran from the high tension down into the sub-station, and he received ten thousand volts.

He was badly burned about the left arms and body, and for many days was confined to the room. Moon was also badly burned, but fortunately the shock struck a rib, just below the heart. A quarter of an inch more and Moon would have been killed. Hoag was paid over a thousand dollars by the company for surgeon's bills, nurse hire and medicine, and this, on top of the verdict, will make it cost the company over $31,000. Hoag sued for $35,000. A. E. Clark, a Portland attorney, was counsel for Hoag, and he was assisted by Roscoe Hunt, a classmate of W. G. Hare, of Hillsboro.

Hoag's lawyers contended that Hoag was not an experienced man and should not have been sent up on the line. It is said that Moon told Hoag to go up and make the connection, while he would go to the other pole. The plaintiff's attorneys contended there was no danger where Moon went, but the fact that he was also burned shows that either place was dangerous.

Moon still works for the company, while Hoag has worked but little since the accident. He still limps, and otherwise shows the results of the burns.

Hoag is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bloyd, of South Hillsboro. He has a wife and three children. He has always been a sober, industrious young man, and stands well in the community.

The company will appeal the case, but in affairs of this kind in the state of Oregon, under the law, there is little chance for a reversal. The case was tried before Judge McGinn.
