AUTOLOADING SHOTGUNS
ANY way you look at it, the Auto-loader is the highest development in modern shotgun design. It gives you loads at your disposal by merely pressing the trigger. It puts the shell in the chamber—to eject the empty shell in the flash split. It saves the gunner's shoulder—rids his sport of any fatigue—increases his shooting average.
Your danger is that in your enthusiasm over the auto-loading principle, you may forget to insist on getting the finest embodiment of this principle—the Remington Auto-loading Shotgun.
The complete advantage of the Remington auto-loader is to shoot better. What you want to do is to get one of the Remington loaders in this section, to demonstrate them to you on the gun stand.

SOLVING A MYSTERY

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press

When a village of 1,000 inhabitants can boast of six widows, five old bachelors, six widowers and five old maids you may take it that that community is "going some."

Such was the case with the village of Grand View, and when a stranger would refer to the rival village of Spring Valley as having two butcher shops he was met with the reply:

"Yes, sir, I admit that she has, but where are her widows and widowers and old maids and old bachelors? She hasn't enough to count on two fingers."

If you are looking for a home, sir, go no further than this, where business is always steady and real estate on the boom."

There was a flaw in the armor, though stragglers did not get on to the fact. While those four classes of people were residents, there were no marriages between them.

The catch among the combined widows and bachelors was Abraham Gunner. He was a luch. He was the wealthiest. He was popular.

All of a sudden Abraham received a drop letter from the postoffice. It was written by a woman who said she adored and loved him and hoped he would not judge her too harshly for her plain statement of fact. He might never come to know the writer, but he could treasure it in his heart that one woman at least held him above all other men in the world.

Abraham scratched his ear and grinned.

"Who the devil can it be?" Abraham kept repeating to himself as he worked about the mill, but wondering and guessing didn't bring the solution.

That evening he didn't appear at the drug store to play checkers. He re-appeared at home to read that letter over and over and try for a clue. Of course no married woman had written him this and as he was forty years old and made no secret of it in his marriageable girls in town would pass him by.

"Is some one giving me a job?" was Abraham's conclusion as he quit speculating and went off to bed and to sleep.

On the third day thereafter he received another letter from the same person. It was also full of admiring terms. It was not likely they would ever meet, the unknown wrote, but she was strangely and strongly interested in his welfare.

As a bachelor, he must live a more or less lonely life.

As a husband, he would have a complete and companionship.

As a bachelor, as he had been for years and was yet he knew nothing whatever of the comforts of a home.

It was hoped he would give the subject all due consideration and, in case he decided to enter the bonds of matrimony, might he take to the altar such a bride as a good man deserved?

"By thunder, but that's a darn good woman, whoever she is!" exclaimed Abraham as he read the letter.

After ten minutes he read it again and mused.

"Who can it be? Who can it be?"

"Say, old man, you must have heard some bad news," was the greeting he got from a dozen friends in the next three days.

"What makes you think so?"

"Why, your face is as long as a candle, and you were going right past without speaking."

It was almost a week before another letter came. Same handwriting—same womanly interest in his welfare.

"And has it ever occurred to you?" was one of the paragraphs in the letter. "That a man situated as you are is selfish not to marry? It would relieve at least one woman from her cares and struggles. It would add one more household to the many."

"By John, but I'd propose to that woman in a holy minute if I knew who she was!" exclaimed Abraham, and when he reflected that he didn't know and had no way of finding out he wanted to kick over chairs and call his dog names.

Five hundred people a day called at the postoffice. How could they all be watched?

Abraham had no intimate man friend to go to with the letters.

He had a strong admiration and liking for the woman, no matter whether she was an old maid or a widow, but how was she to know it? How was he to find her and tell her so?

The old lurch received a fourth letter and then a plan popped into his head. The postmistress had held her position for five years. She must know the handwriting of scores and scores of women. Why hadn't he thought of it before?

At midforenoon Abraham left his mill and walked to the postoffice and entered with firm step and handed one of the envelopes to the postmistress at the general delivery window and asked:

"Can you tell me, please, if you recognize that hand?"

"Um, um, ah-um!" she stammered as a blush came to her cheek.

"Say, by cracky, Mrs. Dayton, you are a widdler!" almost shouted the man.

"Yes."

"Drat me, but it never occurred to me!"

"No."

"I'll come in this evening and we'll set a date for the marriage!"

"But, Mr. Gunner—"

But he called and the date was set, and there was no postponement on account of the weather or anything else.
