People interested in Decoration Day services request the Argus to remind cemetery lot owners that the day will soon be at hand. Cemeteries are often very much neglected, and it is high time that work was being done on improvement of appearances. The people of the Tualatin Plains cemetery wish very much to have this work done at once, so that all will be in readiness when the day of grave decoration arrives. This is largely a labor of love and sentiment, but the expense is so slight-25 or 50 cents from each person that it would appear that all could stand for improvement, and volunteer the small amount without being asked.
