J. H. GARRETT ELECTED DIRECTOR

Peter Boscow Chosen Clerk Without Opposition Unanimous

One hundred and six voters were out to the annual school meeting in Hillsboro, Monday afternoon, although mercury stood 95 in the shade. J. H. Garrett was elected director of the school board for a term of three years by a vote of 39 to 40 for H. T. Bagley, the outgoing member of the board, and chairman for the past year. Mr. Bagley was nominated by W. N. Barrett, and B. P. Cornelius seconded the nomination in a short address. Richard Carlile named Mr. Garrett.

There was but one nomination for school clerk—that of Peter Boscow, named by R. H. Greer—and he was elected by acclamation. Mr. Boscow has been a school officer, either as director or clerk, at Cedar Mill, West Union and Hillsboro, for all of 40 years. He takes a great pride in the clerkship, and in a touching talk, thanked the voters for their confidence.

Mr. Boscow came to Oregon in 1865 and in 1866 was elected clerk out at the old Academy district, near North Plains, his first service in the county as a school official.

The free school books measure was downed 99 to 7.

Clerk Boscow's report, which was read, embraces the following statistics:

Number of school age, 4 to 21 males, 405; females, 402; total, 807.

Teachers employed—male, 3; female, 20; total, 23.

THE CRUELTY OF MAN

As Typified in the Case of the Hand-Some Suspender Seller.

"I HAVE made up my mind," said Betty, the beautiful saccharinizer, "that I'll never marry any man who can't afford to have a fast class automobile."

Reginald Bushbridge, the well-known suspender seller, permitted a shadow of disappointment to overspread his handsome countenance.

"I suppose, then," he said, "I may as well quit calling on you."

"Oh, I didn't intend to frighten you away."

"I'm not frightened, but I will confess that I am saddened by your remark."

"Anyhow, I never supposed you cared for me particularly."

"I think I have given you many reasons for believing that I cared for you."

"You hardly ever take me anywhere."

"I can't afford to take you to places where it is expensive."

"You might go in business for yourself."

"I've thought of that. If I only had a few hundred dollars I'd try it."

"I believe you want to get rid of me."

"Why do you say that?"

"You turn down every proposition I make."

"I hadn't noticed that you had made any proposition."

"Well, I've made some suggestions."

"Would you care for me if I owned an automobile?"

"I think I could learn to."

"Then I'm going to kiss you."

"No, no! Don't you dare—not yet!"

"When may I?"

"Have you a quarter?"

"Yes."

"Take me to the movies, and then?"

"And then what?"

"I'll see."

"Woman," he cried, "I believe you have been trifling with me. Promise before I spend my money."

"Oh, well, if I must, I suppose I must. That's the way with you men. You never are willing to do anything for a girl without making her feel that she is under obligations to you!"—Chicago Record Herald.

The Negligent Secretary.

Mrs. Newyrich, to her social secretary—Miss Fletcher, I hate to say it, but I'm afraid you ain't up in all the requirements.

The Secretary—Please explain.

Mrs. Newyrich—Why, I was talking to that fat Mrs. Wadde this afternoon as she said I ought to join the Supper club—an' I don't tell you every mentioned it.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Surprised.

"That ball game was most interesting," said the man from abroad.

"What feature of the occasion impressed you the most?"

"The crowd. I don't recall having seen such a large assemblage of people with nobody dancing the tango!"—Washington Star.

Taking No Chances.

"Do you know his wife well?"

"Not at all."

"Would you like to be introduced to her?"

"I don't think it would be safe. I'm the friend he always blames for keeping him out late."—Detroit Free Press.

Some Relief.

Patrice—He says his books are his best friends.

Patrice—But he's forgetting the ladies.

"Oh, no, he's not. He says he can shut the books up when he gets tired."—Yonkers Statesman.

Results Wanted.

"Who is that young man that calls on daughter?"

"A budding poet, father."

"Well, tell him to come around when he has blossomed and is able to show the fruit of his labors."—Kansas City Journal.

Malapropism.

Visitor—Your husband gets a lot of sentiment out of his pipe.

Mrs. Richquic—Goodness, yes! It is perfectly disgusting to see him clean it.—Judge.
