JOHN KEEFE AGAIN IN TOILS OF LAW

Arrested at Oregon City, Friday Morning, and Taken to Portland

CHARGE OF USING MAILS FOR FRAUD

Operated Out of Hillsboro About a Year Back, and is Known Here

John Keefe, a young man of Irish descent, of prepossessing appearance, and known to a number of Hillsboro people, was arrested at Oregon City, Friday morning, by a United States Deputy Marshal, and taken to Portland, to answer a charge preferred by Uncle Sam—the offense being alleged use of the mails to defraud.

Keefe has been operating for over a year, and he claimed to be a civil engineer. He sent out advertisements to over 3,000 papers, telling prospective customers that he could locate them on government land. Many of these papers Keefe paid, but many never received a cent. The government commenced taking charge of his mail recently, and the officials find that he bilked 1500 newspapers, and that he collected from $1.50 to $3.40 from people numbering from 300 to 1,000.

Keefe was taken into custody last August by Inspector Morse, of the mail service. No formal arrest was made, but he was taken before the officials of the department. United States Attorney Reames, through assistant Johnson, placed him under a nominal parole at the time, Keefe promising to repay those from whom he had received money.

Keefe reported regularly for a few weeks and then turned missing. He was located the other day at Oregon City, and was found in quarantine. He had been diphtheritic, and was in squalid surroundings. As soon as quarantine was raised Keefe was arrested in response to an indictment found by United States Grand jury last November.

According to Mr. Morse, Keefe's story is approximately as follows:

Last June Keefe went down to Klamath County and looked over several sections of homestead land recently opened near Crescent. The sight of the land inspired him with the idea of furnishing maps to prospective locators. Without loss of time he inserted the following advertisement in newspapers throughout the country—at the time of his indictment last November the authorities knew of 2141 publications in which it had appeared—and without bothering to pay the bills sat down to await results. The ad read:

"Large tract of land in Southern Oregon now open for settlement. Good climate, rich soil, irrigation unnecessary to raise finest crops. For large map and full information send $1.50 to John Keefe, Corvallis, Or. Two years a U. S. surveyor and timberman. An opportunity to get a good, fertile, free homestead, near small town and railroad."

Soon answers were pouring in. Keefe took the enclosed money, and in reply sent back a small Rand-McNally map of Oregon with an ink-line drawn about four townships. The map cost about 9 cents. He also sent a letter with a small plat showing several sections of land sketched in pencil on the bottom. In the letter he told the procedure of taking out a homestead, affirmed the description of the country set out in his ad, and laid further lines by stating that if the customer was not satisfied with this locality he could advise him of others.

At first the fee was set at $1.50, but later he was led to raise the ante to $3.40. While the bargain price was still on, Postoffice Inspector Clement sent Keefe a money order for $1.50. In return he got nothing, but the money order was cashed just the same.

G. L. Huston, the Beaverton grocer, was in town Saturday morning. He lives at Oak Park, and makes the trips to his business and back, daily.

The Argus knows of a ranch of less than 200 acres, all cleared, in this county, located on railway line, that one can purchase for $100 per acre. Pay $7000 down and terms on balance. Unless you are in the market do not ask questions. If you are interested see Mr. Long. 47

William Bissner, chief engineer on the schooner "King and Winge," which has been up on an Alaskan run, is spending his vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bissner, of South Tualatin. Mr. Bissner was one of the party that rescued the Karluk party from Wrangel Island, in Alaskan waters, last Spring. He says that when the Karluk was destroyed by the ice floe the crew assembled their provisions on Wrangel Island, and that the executive management of the wrecked colony was not of the best. They were found disorganized and with no attempts to recognize the first principles of sanitation. One of the crew only made any attempt to get out and shoot any game, and as he took a great deal of exercise he was in prime condition when the majority were sick. Mr. Bissner will remain here until Spring, and will then return to Seattle to take his run.

James Plumlee, of Gaston, was acquitted by a jury in Judge Smith's court last Thursday evening, after trial on the charge of killing a deer out of season. Ora Davenport, in jail on a bootlegger charge, testified that he was with Plumlee one day, when a deer jumped into the road ahead of them. Plumlee, according to Davenport's testimony, grabbed the rifle from Davenport's hands and brought down the venison. The meat was then taken to the Gray place, according to Davenport's evidence, and the Grays admitted there was some meat, but they weren't exactly desirous of swearing it was venison. The jury concluded that Davenport's evidence was not sufficient to base a conviction on, and in a few minutes after retiring brought in a not guilty verdict. The jury: R. C. Vaught, J. A. Imbrie, Aug. Tewa, Thos. Kerr, J. G. Foote and C. E. Deichman. Geo. R. Bagley defended Plumlee and says he is satisfied if Plumlee had killed a venison he would have sent him a "bunk."
