Probability Not Strong That Judicial Bill Will be Referred

Attorney General Brown has ruled that if there is a referendum of the judicial bill that placed Washington and Clackamas counties in one district soes on the ballot at an election that it he is engaged in milling, was in on the ballot at an election that it the county seat the last of the must go on as a state measure, pure and simple, because the circuit court is a state court in every sense of the word.

> There has been some talk about a referendum, and those favoring the move thought the vote for or against the bill, if referred, might be taken only in the counties affected. This would have placed the election in six or seven counties. The ruling of the state's attorney, however, will make it difficult for ballot placing, and moreover, it will hardly carry if signatures sufficient are secured to get the matter on the lists.
