ONE OYSTER ENOUGH.

He Swallowed It Alive and Had to Kill It After It Was Dead.

A farm laborer from the interior on his first visit to London dropped into a small oyster shop where a number of men were eating raw oysters. The extreme satisfaction displayed on the faces of those about him created longings of a gustatory nature in the new arrival, who edged his way up to the counter in anticipation of eating a real live, juicy oyster.

It was the first time he had seen an oyster, and he became at once interested, and when the shellfish had been finally uncased he proceeded to balance it on the end of his fork, then, with a look of extreme satisfaction, gulped it down.

"Great Scott!" shouted a man standing near him. "You haven't swallowed the oyster alive, have you?"

There was a horrible pause.

"That critter will eat right through you!" shouted another.

By this time the poor countryman was shaking with fear and horror. He commenced to have terrible pains in his abdomen and was soon doubled up in his agony. He begged some one to go for a doctor to get the thing out.

DROPPED THE BOTTLE.

He continued to grow worse, when some one suggested that he take a dose of tobacco sauce, which, it was claimed, would kill the object that was creating such terrible commotion in his internal arrangement.

He grasped the bottle with avidity and took a draft. Then he let a blood curdling yell out, dropped the bottle, jumped about six feet in the air, clutched his stomach and gasped. He became blue in the face, and tears were running down his face, when some one thrust a bottle of oil into his mouth, and he was forced to drink copious drafts.

The effect was magical. The oyster was evidently "dead." He became more composed, and when he finally recovered his breath he said:

"We killed it. But when that darned stuff got into my stomach that oyster rushed around as if a shark was after it."—London Scraps.

Be Natural.

Don't try to be somebody else. You were made with a face and a voice and a character not quite like anybody else, and your manner ought to be your own. It will be sweeter and more attractive for being natural.

It Stung.

They were all sitting around telling funny anecdotes. And they were all good friends but two—the cleverest girl and the runner up for those honors. Those two hated each other naturally. The cleverest girl told a humorous story and it was received with great applause.

When the laughter had ceased the deadly rival said: "My goodness! That story is at least forty years old!"

The other one didn't blink. She smiled sweetly and answered: "What a memory you have, dear! Fancy remembering that little story ever since you heard it the first time!"—Argonaut.

Feeling the Game Warden.

A game warden heard that a restaurant was serving game out of season. He disguised himself with a false beard, visited the place and ordered a pheasant. The pheasant, delicately high, like Roquefort cheese, as all good pheasants should be, was served to the game warden, and he devoured it to the last morsel. At the end of his repast the game warden summoned the proprietor and said:

"I arrest you, sir, in the name of the law!"

The proprietor's mouth opened in astonishment. He swallowed two or three times, then he gasped:

"Wh—what for?"

"For serving me a pheasant out of season," said the game warden.

A look of relief appeared on the proprietor's face.

"Oh," he said, "that wasn't pheasant! It was crow."—Exchange.

What She Feared.

Some time ago a gas main was laid along a country road, and many residents took advantage of it to more liberally illuminate their homes. One of these was Joshua Jones.

"Then gals o' mine," remarked Mrs. Jones to a neighbor in speaking of the improvement some time later, "come right in the home, strike a match and light the thing without a bit o' fear, but I wouldn't touch it with a ten foot pole."

"You wouldn't?" exclaimed the wondering neighbor. "For land sakes! What is there to be feared of?"

"Well, it's jes' this way," explained Mrs. Jones. "If ye light a lamp and it explodes ye kin chuck it out the window, but that gas is natted fast, and if it explodes ye can't chuck it no where."—Exchange.

Buckingham's Pranks.

After the defeat and flight of Charles I. the daredevil Duke of Buckingham disguised himself as a mountebank, set up a stage in the heart of London and for days laughed in the faces of the stern Puritans, who were thirsting for his life. One day when his own sister, the beautiful Duchess of Richmond, was passing the jocular duke set the mob on to drag her from her carriage. They forced her to witness the pranks of her brother, whom she recognized, but could not betray.

THE GOOD JUDGE MEETS THE SUCCESSFUL DETECTIVE

AFTER you use a pouch, you too will know you have found tobacco satisfaction. Just tuck it away and let the rich, satisfying tobacco taste come to you steady and naturally. "Right-Cut" is the Real Tobacco Chew and you'll know it all right and like it better than the old kind. Pure, rich, mellow tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is the Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary corded tobacco makes you spit too much. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with poisonous and noxious. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.
