We Want Everybody to Know

That we will, beginning at once, give Cash Register receipts with every cash sale, showing amount of sale, date and who made the sale. We will ask you to keep these receipts as we are going to give back to our cash customers one day's cash sales each month. We will select one day each month and will announce in our window on the 5th day of each month the date we have selected, and then all you will have to do is look over your Cash Register receipts from us and see if you have any bearing that date, if you have just bring them to us and we will refund your money. There is no trick to this proposition.

MRS. AUGUSTA WINIECKE

Mrs. Augusta Winiecke, of Farmington, died August 1, 1915, from a paralytic stroke, sustained a day or so prior to her death, at the Hotel Tualatin, while visiting a daughter-in-law, who had been brought to Hillsboro for a surgical operation. Mrs. Winiecke was born in Germany in 1861, and would have been aged 54 next December 10. She came to America when a young woman with her husband, and first settled in Milwaukee, Wis., later moving to Buxton, Oregon, where she lived for 21 years.

Three years ago she moved to Farmington. The husband died May 21, 1906. Funeral services were conducted by E. W. Luecke, burial taking place August 3. Of her immediate family, two sisters survive—Mrs. Fred Greener, of near this city, and Mrs. Martin Genthart, of above Banks. The following children survive: Mrs. Henry Williams, Miss Myrtle Winiecke, Carl, Arnold, William and George Winiecke, all of this county.

Capt. A. M. Collins celebrated his 83rd birthday, Sunday, August 8, at his home at the foot of Second Street. The Captain is a Civil War veteran, and M. C. Collier was his guest in the afternoon. They talked over war days, and had a genuine reunion. The Captain is one of the oldtime millwrights and cabinet makers of Washington County, and he is widely known in this section. For many years he was janitor at the court house, and he has acted as grand jury bailiff many years.

Mrs. John Krug, of North Tualatin Plains, was in Hillsboro Tuesday. She was celebrating her 65th birthday. Mrs. Krug has brought 16 children into the world, 15 of whom are living. She says that when she had a family of little ones she was always able to do her work and attend church every Sunday. "It is all in how you train them to be helpful when they are small," is her explanation.

Lloyd Commons, who has been in St. Vincent's Hospital, Portland, since the first of the year, with a broken leg, spent the week-end with his brother-in-law, Jos. Wolfersperger. He was accompanied by Mr. Patterson, who has been in the hospital for 19 months.

J. C. Jones, of Metzger, Ore., district manager for the Salem District, Woodmen of the World, is in the city this week. Monday evening Mr. Jones addressed the Woodmen in the Moose Hall, and he will for a short time make a campaign for membership.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Nielsen, of Hazeldale, Ore., Aug. 5, 1915, a daughter, weight 8 1/2 pounds. This is the first grandchild of Mrs. A. W. Saxton, of below Newton, and the little lady is in "some luck."

Do not forget to ask for a Schiller when you want a good 10 cent smoke—no "cough dust" in the Schiller. 12tf

Mrs. Josephine Chaney, a popular school teacher of Portland is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Combs, at their residence, "Tualatin Villa," on the River Road. Mrs. Combs was a former pupil of Mrs. Chaney.

Wanted—A good family cow; fresh, or coming fresh soon.—Wm. Fauli, Hillsboro, Oregon, Box 505. 21-3

E. L. Moore and wife returned Monday from a few days visit at Rockaway.

A new shipment of Cameras and Kodaks just in at the Pharmacy.

J. E. Bennett, of near Orengo, was a city caller Tuesday morning.

For sale: Shout, Anzora goat, and some milk cows.—Jos. Seus, Farmer 5115, Hillsboro, R. 3.

Miss Elinor Wilkes is spending her vacation at Rockaway.

An Incident of the Boxer Movement In China

By JOHN Y. LARNED

Some years ago Hugh Worthington, a young man of fortune, desiring to enter the field of diplomacy, secured an appointment in the service of the United States government at Peking. Worthington was more interested in seeing the country than in his official duties, which were nominal, and he traveled over such parts of China as were open to foreigners. One day he fell in with a mandarin who had been a good deal in England and spoke the language. The mandarin traveled in style, being carried in a chair, common in Europe until near the beginning of the nineteenth century, by two men and attended by several other servants.

Worthington, who traveled on horseback, on joining the mandarin rode beside the chair, chatting with him. The American knew enough of China to understand that it was infested with robbers and was armed to the teeth. The mandarin was an elderly person, unused to arms, but his servants were prepared to defend him. They were armed with pikes, short swords and other weapons, which Worthington considered next to useless in a fight with an enemy properly accoutred.

Suddenly while passing through a narrow cut in the road the party was attacked by a dozen men bent on robbery. They were not much better armed than the mandarin's servants, but they outnumbered the latter, who immediately took to flight, leaving their master in the hands of the enemy.

Worthington drew a revolver from under his coat at each hip and began a fusillade that put the robbers to flight. Upon this the servants returned and humbly begged the master's forgiveness for having deserted him. He was profuse in his thanks to the American, who had not only saved a considerable amount of money for the Chinaman, but his life as well. He begged Worthington to name some favor that he could do him, but the latter said that he wanted for nothing in the world. Then the mandarin took up a bamboo umbrella and opened it. Calling for a writing stick, he wrote on it something as unintelligible to his preserver as the receipt of a Chinese laundryman in America. Handing it to Worthington, he said in a voice so low as not to be heard by his servants: "A time is coming when there will be a movement on the part of our ignorant and superstitious people to rid China of all foreigners. Keep this umbrella and if attacked open it in the face of your would be murderer."

Worthington paid no attention to the man's warning. Every one knew that foreigners were hated by the Chinese, and there had always been talk about the latter being massacred. The American was young, and the young take little thought of danger. But he was too polite not to assure the mandarin that he would keep his gift as a remembrance of him and the episode.

An American named Preston lived in Peking, who operated a banking house which was a branch of one in New York. Worthington spent a good deal of time at his house, attracted by the banker's daughter, Emma Preston. When the Boxer trouble broke out a month after the foregoing episode Worthington was at Preston's house. It was without the regions of the embassies and entirely unprotected. Worthington on the first sign of danger returned to the embassy for leave to absent himself for the protection of the family in which he was interested. Having attained it, he was about to start back when he noticed the umbrella given him by the mandarin. The day was very hot and it occurred to him to take it for protection against the sun's rays. As to the words spoken concerning it if attacked by an enemy, he had forgotten them, but he did not forget to take with him a couple of revolvers and a supply of cartridges.

As Worthington approached the Preston home he noticed knots of Chinamen talking together excitedly. Some of them scowled at him, but since they had as much dread as hatred of a "foreign devil," they did not attack him. He reached the Preston home safely, but found the family in great trepidation, expecting that at any time a mob would attack and murder them. The anticipated trouble occurred the next day. The banker's residence was well known, and a crowd of Chinamen armed with all sorts of implements from a scythe to a razor came down for murder. Worthington knew that, though armed, he could not withstand so large a force; nevertheless he stationed himself at a window over the front door, ready to use up his cartridges.

The howling mass came, stopped before the house and were about to make an onslaught upon it when suddenly all their eyes were cast to a window directly beneath the one Worthington occupied. Then every weapon was lowered, every knife was sheathed and the Chinamen moved on.

Worthington was at a loss to account for this sudden change, but it was soon explained to him. One of the family had caught up his umbrella, as a drowning person will catch at a straw, opened it and held it at a window on the ground floor as a protection against stones that were being thrown in. On it was a message signed by a man to whom the Boxers looked as a commander:

Respect this man and his family and his property.

Buckingham's Pranks.

After the defeat and flight of Charles I. the dave devil Duke of Buckingham disguised himself as a mountebank, set up a stage in the heart of London and for days laughed in the faces of the stern Puritans, who were thirsting for his life. One day when his own sister, the beautiful Duchess of Richmond, was passing the jocular duke set the mob on to drag her from her carriage. They forced her to witness the pranks of her brother, whom she recognized, but could not betray.
