THE MAYO WRECK

The Board of Inquiry finds that a passenger train, near Mayo, Aug. 22, while rounding a fifteen-degree curve, on a three per cent ascending grade, at a speed of fifteen miles per hour, had the forward wheels on rear truck of last coach derailed, running a distance of 210 feet from point of derailment; train being brought to a stop by application of conductor's valve by rear brakeman.

The examination of the equipment involved conclusively disclosed that this derailment resulted from Wheel No. 4 shifting off its wheel seat 1 3/8 inches, which caused it to mount rail on outside of curve. Removal of wheel from its axle showed that it had not been thoroughly and firmly applied; which defect, however, was not detectable under ordinary inspection.

Description of wheel: 36 inch rolled steel; 5x9 journal; applied at Brooklyn S. P. Co. Shops 11-10-14; Record No. RS-30769. Maximum pressure used to apply wheel, 65 tons. Operator by whom applied, Mr. A. Johnson; weight of coach C. P. 1249; SS,000 lbs.

SCHOLLS GRANGE FAIR

The date set for the Scholls Grange Fair is October 15th and 16th. The committee in charge are planning for a big fair, with several unique attractions added to those of previous fairs. There will be a stock show and all lovers of good stock are kindly requested to begin thinking about which animals and how many they wish to exhibit. There will be the usual fine display of fruits, vegetables, grains, grasses, canned goods and fancy needlework.

Entries for exhibit are open to each and every one in the community.

For further particulars address or phone to Lester R. Campbell, Hillsboro, Or., Route 2, or E. G. Heaton, Laurel, Ore.

Card of Thanks

We desire to thank those who so kindly assisted us in our bereavement, the death of the late Perry E. Hughes, our loving husband and father. We also extend thanks for the beautiful floral offerings, and return special thanks to the Modern Woodmen of America Lodge.

By request the Argus publishes the provisions of the Mothers' pension law: "Every woman who has one or more children under the age of 16 years, dependent wholly on her labor, and whose husband is either dead or an inmate of some state institution, or is wholly incapacitated from work, is entitled to receive from the public moneys of the county in which she and her children reside, the sum of $10 per month for one child and $7.50 per month for each additional child, said amount not to exceed $40 per month." This relief is granted only when it will permit the mother to remain home with her children, excepting during working hours, and the mother must also be a suitable person to bring up her children. If she be improvident, or unworthy of handling the fund, the money can be paid to some other person for their care and maintenance. This law does not apply to the woman or children who have property sufficient for their support, and the county court has wide latitude in this regard. When the child (or children) arrives at the age of 16 the pension stops.

Very Long Lived

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

"Mirandy," said her aunt, Miss Quackenbos, "I don't see any reason why you and Dan Perkins shouldn't be married at once instead of waiting for me to get out of the way and—leave you what I got. I tell you what I'll do. I'm an old woman and not likely to live the year out. Dr. Baldwin says there isn't a sound organ in my shriveled old body. If you and Dan are certain you're going to get my property you'll feel more like getting married than if you're not. A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

"I'll leave you property worth $10,000 on condition that you take care of me for the few months I have to live. You bind yourselves to give me $500 a year. The money is invested at that, so you'll not be out a cent, and when I'm buried you'll have the whole thing."

Dan had a salary of $1,200 a year, but with nothing laid up he had declined to marry Miranda, who had nothing, until he should make some accumulation. This offer of the aunt gave him courage, and the pair, having taken over the property and signed a bond to pay Mrs. Quackenbos $500 a year so long as she lived, were married. A part of the estate was the dwelling in which the old woman lived. Being too large for her, she moved out to spend the rest of her days with a sister, and the bridal couple moved in.

Now, this was an excellent arrangement. It gave the young couple a confidence they would not otherwise have felt. But they were prevented from making any use of the property until it was unencumbered by the annuity. Dan was disposed to refrain from encroaching upon the estate, but Miranda needed this and needed that, and when her husband objected she would say that her aunt was getting worse every day and surely couldn't live the month out. Then Dan would yield, and the desired articles would be bought.

But the old lady didn't die. After lying supposedly at the point of death for a long while she suddenly got out of bed and seemed more chipper than ever. Indeed, she announced that she was disinclined to mope and was going to start a chicken farm. This she did in a small way, and the interest she took in it improved her health amazingly.

Meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Perkins were having a hard time to get on. The Quackenbos property gave them no income and had been an inducement to spend money that did not come in, as had been expected. Children came to them, and it seemed the more children and the older and more experienced they grew the more vigorous the old lady became. Of course they could not object to her remaining alive, but she spoke to them on the subject thus:

"Reckon you two think I'm going to live forever. It ain't my fault. I don't want to hang on any longer. I'm ready to go any time. After all, it won't do you any harm. You're economizin' at a time when you ought to economize, and you'll reap the benefit of it all after I'm gone."

Then the couple would look at each other and sigh, knowing that their debts had already nearly eaten up the whole expected property.

The old lady hung on till the Perkins' debt exactly balanced the $10,000 they had taken in exchange for the annuity. Then she died. They paid the funeral expenses—$300—which left them in debt by that amount.

Considering how unfortunate they had been in the old lady's living so long, they behaved very well. Indeed, they did not blame her. They blamed themselves for having drawn upon the property before they possessed it. They not only refrained from accusing Miss Quackenbos from desigedly drawing them into a trap, but spoke kindly of her both in the domestic circle and to others.

Having buried the old lady, they put the property they had taken from her in the market to sell to pay their debts. The one day they went to her quarters to remove to their house the few belongings she had left. Among these articles they brought away a tin box. It was locked, and they did not find the key, but since there seemed to be something in it Dan pried it open. Within they found a bundle of papers and pass books. Miranda opened one of the books and found that it showed a credit at a savings bank of $327.56. Then she opened another, and it showed a credit of $2,742.18. A third more than doubled these two together.

Dan unfolded a document, which proved to be a deed to a dwelling and another to a business block. All this property was in Miss Quackenbos' name. The Perkins couple began to open their eyes. The old lady had evidently possessed more property than she had conveyed to them. But who had inherited what these vouchers stood for?

They began to empty the box in a search for a will. Pass books, deeds, certificates of stock and bonds were picked out and strewed the floor. Then Miranda, running over the indorsements on a bundle of papers, exclaimed: "Here it is. Last will and testament!"

Unfolding the paper with trembling hands, she cried:

"To my beloved niece, Miranda Quackenbos Perkins."
