SCHOLLS GRANGE FAIR

The date set for the Scholls Grange Fair is October 15th and 16th. The committee in charge are planning for a big fair, with several unique attractions added to those of previous fairs. There will be a stock show and all lovers of good stock are kindly requested to begin thinking about which animals and how many they wish to exhibit. There will be the usual fine display of fruits, vegetables, grains, grasses, canned goods and fancy needlework.

Entries for exhibit are open to each and every one in the community.

For further particulars address or phone to Lester R. Campbell, Hillsboro, Or., Route 2, or E. G. Henton, Laurel, Ore.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Pomeroy went to Portland, Friday, returning Saturday. They went to the Rose City with Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Henton, who came down from Shaniko, last week, in an auto, making the run between points in a day. The Pomeroy's had the pleasure of seeing both their grandchildren together, the other grandchild being that of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Henton.

Robt. Muralt, of Hillsboro, was last night charged with disturbing the peace of the family. He is being held in jail. He has been drinking. He was released on bail Monday.

P. J. Vanderzanden, of near Banks, was in Friday, with a load of clover seed. He has sold $100 worth of clover seed in the clear besides getting twelve loads of hay off a small tract. This has been a poor year for clover, and P. J.'s record for last year was considerable better.

John Beatty, in charge of the Wall building construction, has the basement excavated and is now putting in the concrete foundation and the lower walls. Lack of material from the supply source caused a setback of a day or so.

The Enterprise Beer Agency has sued Kennedy & Daly, who are now out of business, having conducted a saloon at Timber. Their place burned up in July, and both are now out of the county.

The Oswego Cement plant is soon to start up, and it will employ two hundred men when it gets to running full capacity. Nevada capital is putting the plant into operation, while Portland capital has allowed it to remain idle.

J. W. Westbrook, a Portland attorney, was in the circuit court, Monday, before Judge Bagley, asking for a decree in foreclosure.

J. Q. Johnson, of below Dunzer, was a city caller Monday morning.

This is the Stove Polish YOU Should Use

It's different from others because more care is taken in the making, and the materials used are of higher grade.

The Force of Habit

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Thompson was a very commonplace man, and it was difficult for his wife's friends to understand why she loved him so dearly. But an analysis of the heart is not like an analysis of the stomach—that is to say, love is very illusive. We constantly see persons devoted to other persons who are to us unattractive.

However this may be, Molly Thompson was devoted to Bill Thompson—there was not even a grain of romance in his name—and he was the apple of her eye. He was not a successful man, and his wife by various devices supported the family. Every man has some pride at the bottom of his nature, and Bill Thompson did not fancy his position of being taken care of instead of taking care of those naturally dependent upon him. Far from it; she excused him not only to others, but to himself.

One day Bill Thompson went out to look for a position, he said, and when the dinner hour arrived he did not arrive with it. Whatever were Bill's faults, he was never late for a meal. Consequently his wife took fright at once. Within an hour she notified the police that her husband was missing, and a general alarm was sent out.

The alarm did not bring Bill Thompson. A month passed, and he had failed to turn up. His wife was in a terrible state of mind about him, and her friends began to think that it would be better if her suspense were ended by hearing that he was dead. One day a cousin of hers, seeing an unrecognizable corpse in a morgue about the size of Bill Thompson, conceived the idea of pointing it off on Mrs. Thompson as her late husband. The ruse was successful—indeed, more so than might have been expected—the good woman, surprised those in the secret by identifying a patch she had put in the coat of the trousers worn by the corpse.

It was hoped by the widow's relatives that Bill, being dead, would be buried and Mrs. Thompson's mind relieved. They were somewhat disappointed when she insisted on having her dear William cremated in order that she might have the remains of what had been her husband constantly with her. The cremation cost all the money the poor woman possessed, and she had not the wherewithal to purchase an urn for the ashes. She determined to find a temporary receptacle till she might save enough for a better one. Happily there was nothing to be done.

The widow, desirous of having flowers over her husband's ashes, put the urns in a low box containing earth and introduced the plants. They flourished, and the good woman had the satisfaction of seeing them bloom. She said it was almost as satisfactory as if they moved over a grave.

In time Mrs. Thompson saved the money to purchase an urn, and the ashes were emptied from the tureen into it. It was of marble and of very attractive shape. For three years she devoted more care to it than to her house. Not a speck of dust was allowed to remain on it, and the plants amid which it rested were in perpetual bloom.

Then one fine morning this beautiful constancy of grief received a rude shock. Bill Thompson walked into the house in the flesh and with a prosperous look on him. His wife stood between him and the urn containing his ashes with a pumpled look on her face. She had for so long accustomed herself to think of him as in the urn that she could not realize he was there in the flesh. Bill in the urn was her romance; Bill in the flesh, unseen for three years, appeared to her, as he appeared to others, a very commonplace person. Duty finally triumphed, and turning her back on the romance, she embraced the reality.

Thompson had gone away resolved never to return unless in a condition to support his family. He had accumulated quite a property. He desired his wife to remove the ashes she had been weeping over. But to do so was too severe a break in the habit she had acquired. She consented to the removal of the urn from their bedroom the first night Bill slept at home after his return, but her tears were so used to flowing at the retiring hour that they could not be stopped. Bill, hearing a sob, got out of bed, went to a closet where the urn had been placed and put it back on the mantel.

The next day it was removed again, but in the evening, the tears beginning to flow, it was replaced on its accustomed stand. Bill tried to cure his wife by affecting jealousy; but, fearing that if she were forced to choose between him and the ashes of his rival she would choose the latter, he desisted. The urn remains on the mantel.

How He "Lashed"

Two young men were standing in a hotel where they had gone to use the free comb and the free brush. One of them seemed to think he looked rather sorry. He had a new suit of clothes and he turned and twisted as he admired himself in the glass. Finally he could not resist the temptation to hear the spoken word of commendation.

"How do you think I look?" he asked his companion.

"The other looked at him and smiled. "You look like an accident going out somewhere to happen," was his retort.
