There are too many auto accidents in connection with railway crossings, and a little law would not be out of place. When a train crosses another railway track it is compelled to come to a full stop. So it should be with auto service. While this would be more or less an inconvenience it would prevent the annual toll of life-wherein automobiles are run down. It takes but a minute, and spells safety. While it might be objected to as a safety measure because of inconvenience, it should be remembered that a passenger train generally carries hundreds while an auto carries but a few. It means safety to the few as well as to the many—and the Argus hopes the next legislature will pass such a statute. Let the law require an auto to come to a full stop before crossing a railroad track.

Of course there will be those who will object to Congress passing a law making the State of Oregon trustee for the O. & C. land sales, to see that the railway company gets its $2.50 per acre. But this should not deter that body from such legislation, and also a provision that the timber can be sold, where a 160-acre tract is valuable as timber, and the money thrown to the state, or divided between state and government. It could be legislated that the buyer of the land must make certain terms of residence on the place before he gets full title, the railway company to get its equity, however, at once, upon sale or partial sale. It is easy enough—and the objectors will object no matter what is done, unless the company is granted full title.

In the death of Andrew Jack, Hillsboro loses a type of the Oregon pioneer in which the state had pride. He was the soul of honor and integrity, and a man of sterling worth.

ANDREW JACK

Andrew Jack, one of Hillsboro's most prominent citizens, died at the family home, on Washington Street, at 11:10, Sept. 30, 1915, after an illness of but a week, his affliction being in the nature of heart failure and paralysis.

He was a son of the late John Jack, of Farmington, and was born in Highland County, Va., June 22, 1845. At the age of 8 years his family moved West, spending 5 years in Iowa and 5 years in Nebraska. In 1862 the family crossed the plains to Oregon, settling near Farmington. Mr. Jack was married to Martha Jane Stewart, Nov. 7, 1870. He bought a ranch near Farmington a year after marriage and resided there until seven years ago last April, when he sold and moved to Hillsboro. He was a pioneer in hop growing, was a member of the Grange, and was at death of a member of the city council. He was an affiliate of the Christian church, and for years served as school officer in his district. His widow and the following children survive: Calvin Jr., of the American National Bank; Wm. of Beaverton; Miss Hettie, at home; Mrs. Anna Cornelius, wife of F. E. Cornelius, and Via, at home. One child to the union, Maud, died in childhood.

Brothers and sisters surviving are: Calvin Jack Sr., Portland; John Jack, Farmington; Albert Jack, Portland; Mrs. Rebecca Rowell, Scholla; Mrs. Geo. Campbell, Laurel, and Mrs. LaFayette Harris, of Cheney, Wash.

The funeral will take place Saturday, at the home, at 2:00 p. m., and the services will be conducted by a minister of the Christian church. Interment will be in the Odd Fellows' Cemetery.

The outlook for a good football team is not encouraging. All of last year's team graduated, with the exception of Tuggett and Harris, and an entirely new squad will have to be founded. The coach says that with plenty of practice and a good second team to play against we might have a chance for a winning team. Practice is going right along, but a second team should be in the field. Come along, you H. S. fellows, and get the sport.

Testimony. "It is plain that I love you," he began. "Is that on the record?" she asked. "Haven't I always been on the square with you?" "But you have many 'vices,'" she retorted.

"Not a bit of it," he asserted. "What made you 'leave' up?" she queried coquettishly. "The fact that I 'love' you," he replied, with a bow.

"I ought to 'homer' you for that," she answered sweetly. "Come and sit by me on the 'bench,'" he urged.

"Suppose the other should be left?" she murmured. "You shouldn't let your arms 'compass' me!" "I know a preacher who is a good 'joiner,'" he suggested. And they rushed off for the house—Building Age.

Moral "Blacks." It is pointed out by a modern thinker that there is no such thing as a moral risk for when we talk about a "risk" we mean that there is a possibility, but not a certainty, that harm will result. A boy takes a physical risk when he goes skating on that part of the river where the ice is thin. He may fall through and injure his health or lose his life. But when we venture on this ice in our moral life there is no risk in the matter at all. There is no moral catastrophe from the moment we start in that direction. No one can do anything which locks us in by its possible moral danger without thereby definitely passing beyond the line of mere danger into positive injury to his character.

Three Classes. Henry Thomas Bluckie's thoughts and conversation were always on a high level. Once he remarked: "Men and women judge themselves into three classes or orders of intelligence. You can tell the lowest class by their habit of always talking about persons; the next by the fact that their habit is always to converse about things; the highest by their preference for the discussion of ideas."

Almost Sensational. "I have a flipping idea for a meretricious film." "Let's have it. Flipping ideas are scarce." "How a young woman doing the housework while her mother is sitting on the porch manipulating her dolls." New York American.
