County Commissioner Holman, of Multnomah County, was out to Washington County, Sunday, looking over the roads with a view of getting co-operation from the county officials here to have a good road between this city and Portland. Mr. Holman says that there are about three miles between Beaverton and the county line that should be re-dressed with rock, and then about two and a half miles more of necessary macadam between Hillsboro and Beaverton, and it would mean a great deal for county people. Farmers would then have a good road to market, and Mr. Holman says that it would mean a great deal of auto travel to the county, Sundays and evenings, during the Summer season. He says that it would commercially be of benefit to Forest Grove, Hillsboro, Cornelius, and all the towns along the line. Mr. Holman was informed that the county court had done everything possible to get the gap closed this year, but it was found impossible. The matter will be discussed by all the people along the line, and it may be possible that by next mid-Summer the road may be completed.

An occasional Internal Revenue stamp on deeds and instruments filed with the court house officials would not lead one to believe that it would raise the government a very great sum—but an eye-opener was filed here the last of the week. It was the transfer of the Portland, Eugene & Eastern Railway to the Southern Pacific, a mere matter of form under the law, but it took $116 worth of revenue stamps, just the same. One was for $100, one for $10, and two for $3. As C. J. Michelet says, "They are very nice looking stamps, at that." The alleged consideration was about $150,000. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gates, of Leisyville, returned Monday from a trip to the State Fair and to Scio, Linn County. Mr. Gates reports that the Fair was splendid, and he thinks it one of the best ever scheduled.

John Herdlein, of Blooming, was a city caller the first of the week.

Retaliation

By WILLIAM CHAMBERLIN

I've heard a story about a certain orator that will bear repeating. They say that when he was in college he was a member of a debating society and was on a debating team chosen to meet a team from another college for the intercollegiate championship. When this young man came home on vacation he was used to spending a good deal of his time with a girl who lived in the adjoining place to his father's. Both places were in the country, with large grounds about them. The college boy used to go out in the rear of his home and practice elocution. When he was not practicing elocution he was talking soft to the girl next door. Young fellows of that period in life, especially collegians, don't mean anything when they spoon with a girl, and the governor—we'll call him the governor, since he afterward became the chief executive of one of the United States—didn't mean any more than other boys of his age who pretend to be in love. One afternoon—the governor was going back to college the next day for his senior year—Grace from her window saw him sitting in a wood at the back of his home. She could see his features, but could not hear a word he said, not even a sound. Any one who has thus seen a person addressing an audience must have been impressed with the absurd appearance he presented. A smile came over the girl's face, which suddenly gave place to the expression of an idea having entered her brain. Going to a telephone, she took down the receiver and called a number.

"In this the county means asylum?" "Yes, ma'am."

"I think one of your patients must have escaped. At any rate, there is a young man back of the house next to this who is talking to himself and flinging his arms about wildly."

The person at the asylum took down the address and hurried away. Not ten minutes had elapsed before a couple of men in a buggy, with the letters M. G. A. E. painted on the side, drew up in front of the governor's home and, passing through the grounds, saw the governor in the position that had been described to them. Walking slowly and carefully toward him so as not to excite his suspicion of their intent, as soon as they came near enough to him they sprang forward and pinioned his arms. Of course he was greatly astonished, asked a lot of questions and made many protests. The men paid no attention to either, but, one at each of his arms, walked him through the grounds to the road where the buggy stood.

Now, it happened—that's what Grace said, it happened—that she was looking out of her window as the prisoner was walked by in the adjoining lot. When they came opposite her she called out: "What's he been doing?" "Loney," replied one of the captors.

This was the first the governor knew of the reason for his arrest. The cause of his being considered a lunatic dawned upon him at the same time.

"Really, gentlemen," he said, trying to laugh, "this is very funny. Grace explain, please."

What did Grace do but withdraw from the window without a word. The governor looked at her, first with astonishment, then with anger, then with terror. He was hustled to the buggy, placed between the two men and driven away.

Before they reached the asylum Grace had got out a pony cart and driven there herself by a shorter route. At the office she informed the man on duty that she was the person who had telephoned about the lunatic next door and had come to tell them about him. A few minutes later the two asylum men with the governor drove up and entered a waiting room. Presently Grace came in, raised a pair of glasses, through which she stared at the prisoners, then dropped them and said: "All right; that's the man."

"Grace," cried the governor, "for heaven's sake, what does this mean?" But Grace walked away, evidently not inclined to argue with a madman. As soon as she was outside, however, she told the keepers that she was quite sure the man was harmless—indeed, she regretted having caused his capture—and, after considerable vouching for his being merely queer, persuaded the authorities to release him, agreeing to drive him home in her cart.

The governor was put in the cart by his captors, looking by this time positively dangerous. Not a word was spoken till the pony had pattered his little hoofs on the stones for half a mile.

"I presume," said the governor, "that you think you have done something very smart."

"I'm sorry. Forgive me."

There was no sorrow in her tone and no pleading in her request to be forgiven.

When she said during the rest of the drive she was never revealed. The governor, the next day for college was a 50 in his ear. It breaks a man up to be beaten by a woman, and the governor at the Christmas holidays went home ready to bend the knee to the girl who, as he expressed it, had wiped the floor with him.

She sent him back much more of a fanatic than he had been when arrested, but after he got his profession re-learned and married him, she now says that his wife, not he, is the governor, and, whether or not she governs the state, she governs the governor.

Cautions. Miss Plainfield—I would never get married if I had to ask the man. Miss Fort—Maybe you wouldn't then.—Boston Transcript.

As Usual. "Does your wife find anything to talk about?" "Not a thing. And she talks about it."—Judge.
