"The female of the bovine genus is a beneficent mammal. This ruminant quadruped is possessed of corneous protuberances, projecting from the occiput. Her vision is binocular, and she yields an edible and nutritious lacteal exudation. She is quadrupedal and herbivorous, assimilating her food in both the succulent and efficated states. A very small weight, even that of a pin, deflects the bar and causes the circles to expand outward. Each circle indicates a movement of one hundred thousandth of an inch, the pressure of a finger, forming five or more new cir-cles, showing a bending of one twenty-thousandth of an inch.

Malay Weapons.

The national Malay weapon, the creese, is said to have been invented by a Javanese monarch of the fourby a Javanese monarch of the fourteenth century. Its varieties are said to exceed a hundred, and there are in Javanese no fewer than fifty names for them. It varies in size from the two fout wayy binde of fluin down to a mere-toothpick. But the peculiarity is-that the weapon is never ground, but tept rough and sawlike in edge by scouring with lime juice or the juice of an unripe pineapple, gaugimes mixed with arsenic, and it is on this account that creese wounds are so damgerous. Old specimens are so esten serous. Old specimens are so eaten awag by this practice that the blade seems formed from a bunch of wires roughly welded up. Such creesse are highly valued, and some of the aucient ones, heiricous of chiefs, with grotesquely carved and iniaid hitts and sheaths, are almost unpurchasable.
