

Though Different, Still the Same

By F. A. MITCHEL

Dr. T. Howard Puffer—he parted his mama, as well as his hair, in the middle because he was the family physician of the multimillionaires and must do as they did—had just opened a letter containing a $1,000 check for an operation he had performed, when, looking up, or rather down, he espied a small, ragged boy with a pale, hungry face gazing wistfully at him.

"How did you get in here, sonny?" asked the doctor.

"Dodged in when do crowd was gone out. Do dooreporter didn't see me."

It was the end of the doctor's office hours.

"Well, what can I do for you?" asked the doctor.

"Me mudder is sick."

"Where does your mother live?"

"In a tenement on Jimson street."

The doctor was putting away his $1,000 check when the small boy spoke again:

"She tole me to tell yer she hadn't nothin' to pay with. She can't do no washin', and she can't get no pay. She'll pay when she gets to work ag'in."

The doctor looked from his fat pocketbook to the lean boy, but said nothing. The boy was turning to go when the doctor stopped him.

"Stay here till I get a bit of lunch." With that he left the room. The boy rapped about him at the paraphernalia intended for looking at persons' insides, chopping off diseased parts, etc. Among other things was a glass case containing articles which the child could better understand.

There were large pieces of silver, among which he recognized a pitcher. Another was a cup with three handles.

There were also a cane with a gold handle, an urn—all gold—and many enormous jewels.

While the boy was gazing at them the door opened and the doctor returned.

"What's them?" asked the boy, referring to the glittering contents of the case.

"They? They're presents from grateful patients I have helped or who have believed I have helped them, and which is the same. Now we will go and see your mother."

He took the boy out to his limousine, put him in, got in himself, told the chauffeur where to go and was whirled away. When he reached the sickroom a woman lying on a bed looked at him in surprise.

"Why, Jakey?" she exclaimed. "Who have you brought? I told you to go to Dr. Puffer."

"Don't I do as well?" asked the great surgeon.

"Yes, sir, but Dr. Puffer makes it a business of tendin' us poor folks. He only charges 50 cents when he comes, though he makes us pay, and if we don't he makes us sweat."

"You can have as long as you like to pay me, and if you never pay I shall not feel it. Now tell me your symptoms."

Six months later the same boy appeared at Dr. Puffer's office. The doctor, not recognizing him, asked him how he got in. The boy replied that he had sneaked in.

"That's frank," said the doctor.

"What do you want?"

"Me mudder is well."

"Ok, your mother is well?"

"Yes, sir; she's workin' ag'in."

"Who is your mother?"

The thought have been made of a long distance from where they originally grew.

In the Yellowstone the trees now stand where they grew and where they are entombed by the outpouring of various volcanic materials.

Now as the softer rocks surrounding them are gradually worn away they are left standing erect on the steep hillsides. Just as they stood when they were living. In fact, it is difficult at a little distance to distinguish some of these fossil trunks from the lichen covered stumps of kindred living species.

Such an aggregation of fossil trunks is therefore well entitled to be called a true fossil forest.

It should not be supposed, however, that these trees still retain their limbs and similar branches, for the mass of volcanic material falling on them stripped them down to bare, upright trunks.

HELP FOR HOMEY MEN.

Facial Decorations and Other Ways to Tone Down Ugliness.

If my face is too wide a beard lengthens it; if my face is too narrow it expands as if by magic with the addition of what have sometimes been affectionately called "mutton chops" or "siders."

If my nose projects, almost like a nose trying to escape from a face to which it has been sentenced for life, a pair of large, handsome mustaches will provide a proper entourage—a nest, so to speak, on which the nose rests contentedly, almost like a sitting hen; if my nose retreats backward into my face the aesthetic solution is obviously galways.

A stout man can do wonders with his appearance by adopting a pointed beard and a suit of clothes, shirt, necktie and stockings with pronounced vertical stripes. A thin man, on the other hand, becomes at once substantial in effect without being gross if he cultivates side whiskers and wears a suit of clothes, shirt, cravat and stockings with pronounced horizontal stripes.

If my face lacks ferocity and dynamic force it needs a brisk, arrogant mustache, or if it has too much of these qualities a long, sad, drooping mustache will counterbalance them.

The Dancing Mania.

The "dancing mania" of the middle ages came on the heels of the great plague known as the "black death." It was some sort of nervous disease and is now supposed to have been what is known as "St. Vitus' dance."

It began in the year 1374 at Aix-la-Chapelle and spread all over Germany, the Netherlands and Italy. The dancers formed circles hand in hand and appearing to have lost all reason continued dancing, regardless of the bystanders, for hours together until in their wild delirium they fell to the ground in sheer exhaustion.

Painting and foaming at the mouth, they would suddenly spring up and begin the dance again, to be again exhausted, and so on until they died. The mania involved millions of people.

POSTOFFICE POINT.

There is No Mail Station Located on This Arctic Ice Pack.

Almost due north of Bering Strait is a point in the solid north pack that always extends much farther south than the pack at the eastward or at the westward. This point is naturally variable, according to the heat of the summer and the severity of the previous winter, but it does not move more than a few degrees. For fifty or seventy-five years this point of ice has been spoken of by the arctic whalers as "Postoffice point."

This does not mean that there is a postoffice there, but the significance of the name is because the whaling fleets usually are divided, some ships going considerably east of Postoffice point and others west of it. Ships that have been east of it cruise along the edge of the pack and very frequently meet ships that have been in the neighborhood of Postoffice point. It was here therefore that the ships used to meet, after being separated for many weeks, and exchange news and gossip.

The solid north pack comes pretty close to Point Barrow and extends in an irregular line from Point Barrow to Postoffice point. Much of this ice "looks as though it has been there from the year 1" as one of the whaling captains has expressed it.

Bearing in mind the fact that Postoffice point is always to be found in approximately the same latitude and longitude, it seems as though there must of necessity be laid back of it, although of course there is a possibility that there may be a very solid pack of ice instead of land, held in place by comparatively shallow water.

A Famous Statue.

The great temple of Zeus Olympius at Olympia, Greece, was 354 feet long and 171 wide. The columns of this famous shrine were sixty feet in height and six and a half feet in diameter and are the largest which now remain of ancient architecture in marble.

Sixteen of the wonderful columns are still standing and are among the most imposing in the world. In this temple stood the colossal statue of Zeus, forty feet high, on a pedestal of twenty.

This statue was the masterpiece of Phidias, the world's greatest artist, and so famous was it that it was considered an calamity to die without seeing it. The immortal work was removed to Constantinople by Theodosius I and was destroyed by fire in the year 475 A. D.

Consider the Trees.

The trees are lovely in summer; so are the women. But how different are the women and the trees as to their clothes! To be sure, both are delightfully clothed, yet, with the abundant raiment with which the trees are supplied, they require but one trunk to hold it all.

Lumber prices have advanced strongly in Portland, owing to the heavy demand, and it looks as though the big mills will cut all Winter. Log prices, also, have advanced, and a raise of 50 cents per thousand went into effect on rail shipments into the metropolis, concurrent with the raise in the finished product.

Everything points to a full-capacity cut in the near future, and with King Lumber again in the saddle things will hum industrially in the Northwest. It will be time for Portland's lumbermen to get into the harness and not play the waiting game.
